FIGHT OVER FALLS WILL BEGIN TODAY

Hundreds Gather in Clayton in Preparation for Important Legal Battle Between Power Company and State.

By J. WALTER LeCRAW.
(Staff Correspondent.)

Clayton, Ga., May 25.—(Special.)—Hundreds of people, including many of the eminent legal and business heads of Georgia, are gathering today in this interesting little mountain town, in expectation of the hearing of the famous Tallulah Falls suit which goes on trial tomorrow morning.

Here, in the Rabun county court house, is to be staged one of the most significant legal battles of Georgia's history. The stake is a little strip of land, only a mile long, located in the Tallulah gorge, 44 miles from this place, on which a giant $5,000,000 water power electric plant has almost been completed by the Georgia Railway and Power company.

On one side the trained corporation lawyers will defend the power company's title to the land, and argue the wonderful industrial development that will follow the completion of the plant. On the other side the attorney general of the state, aided by the Tallulah Falls Conservation association and its attorneys, will try to prove that the land still belongs to the people of Georgia, who should stop the power plant from operation, even at this late date, and preserve untouched the virgin beauty of "the Niagara of the south."

Many Eminent Atlantans.

Among the people who arrived from Atlanta today are the leading counsel on both sides to the hearing. Attorney General Thomas S. Felder has arrived with Edgar Watkins, and together they will conduct the case for the state of Georgia.

The eminent Atlanta lawyers arrived on the same train, as counsel for the power company—Alex. C. King, Luther Z. Rosser and Charles T. Hopkins. H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, is here also to be associated with them in the suit. Among those retained by the Tallulah Falls Conservation association, who arrived on the scene, is R. C. Ellis, of Tiftion, Ga. Several other lawyers from different parts of the state will be here by the time the court opens Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

Since the hearing will probably take at least a week, the visitors are settling down in the summer hotels that dot Clayton to enjoy the pure mountain air and splendid climate for which the Blue Ridge section is noted.

List of State's Witnesses.

The order of procedure on the first day will be, first, the impanelling of the jury; second, the hearing of the demurrers on both sides; third, the opening of the case by the testimony of the state's witnesses.

Attorney General Felder (Thomas S. not Thomas B.) will offer eighteen witnesses in substantiation of the claim that the land belongs to the state of Georgia. They are mostly residents and officials of Rabun county, located at Tallulah Falls and Clayton, together with a few others familiar with the papers and historical documents connected with the deeding of the land as far back as 1814 and 1819.

Walter Hunnicutt, a pioneer citizen of Tallulah Falls, who is one of the vice presidents of the conservation association, will be called to testify. Frank D. Singleton, editor of the Clayton Tribune; Postmaster J. R. Taylor, of Tallulah Falls; W. M. Aiken, of the Glennbrook, will also be called on for interesting testimony as to the land corners of the property and the deeds connected with it.

Other names on the list of state witnesses are Caleb Woodall, Wiley Pitts, Sam Ledford, B. H. Atkins, John Stone, Charles Stone, H. M. Pitts, J. L. Henson, D. M. R. Vandiver, T. V. Ivester, Joe Dunn and G. V. Stone.

Power Company on Defense.

Names of witnesses for the Georgia Railway and Power company have not yet been made public, owing to the position of the company in being entirely on the defense. Their whole line of testimony will be shifted to meet the evidence presented by the state.

In case the presiding judge decides that the state has not made out a debatable case against the power company, it will be unnecessary for the company to introduce any witnesses at all.

"We have a number of witnesses to present who have valuable testimony in our favor," said Alex. C. King, the well-known Atlanta lawyer of the firm of King & Spalding. "But just exactly who will be called upon will be decided until Tuesday or Wednesday, when we have heard the witnesses for the state."

Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, the well-known president of the Tallulah Falls Conservation association, has not yet arrived in Clayton, and it is not definitely known whether she will be here the early part of the week or not.

HE TOOK WIFE'S ROUTE AND DEATH FOLLOWED

Arnheim Changes Auto's Course to Please Wife—Two Killed and One Injured.

Tarboro, N. C., May 25.—W. M. Arnheim, a prominent business man of this place, and Mrs. Edna Morris, socially well pnown here, were killed, and Mrs. Arnheim dangerously hurt this evening about 7 o'clock near Tarboro, when an automobile in which a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Arnheim, Mr. and Mrs. Morris, and a Mr. Matthews were riding, plunged into a ditch half filled with water.

Mrs. Morris was dead when taken from under the car and it is believed that she was drowned. Mr. Arnheim lived for almost an hour. Mrs. Arnheim was thrown from the car when it plunged into the ditch and in some manner received a terrific blow on the head, while several teeth were knocked out. Mr. Matthews and Mr. Morris jumped and saved themselves.

It is said that the party was proceeding down along the road when Mr. Arnheim, who was driving, was asked by his wife to turn and take another route to town. Mr. Arnheim turned the car, when suddenly it shot forward with terrific speed and plunged into a ditch along the side of the road.

The generally accepted theory of the accident is that Mr. Arnheim, as he turned the car toward the other road, intended to apply the brakes, but that his feet struck the accelerator instead.

BRITISH MOB ATTACKS WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS

Rioting in West End of London. Police Protect Sylvia Pankhurst.

London, May 25.—Victoria Park, in the west end, was the scene of rioting today when trades unionists and socialists attempted to hold a demonstration in support of votes for working women. Fifteen platforms had been erected, elaborately decorated with flags. The crowd stormed a truck on which were Sylvia Pankhurst and other militant suffragettes and dragged it outside the park.

Mounted and foot police, by repeated charges, finally drove the crowd away. Women and men fainted in the crush and children were trampled upon. In many instances the women's clothing was nearly torn off. There were innumerable free fights and ambulance corps were kept busy.

Suffragists paraded with their colors, the standard bearers wearing red liberty caps. This was the cause of more disorder. The mob tore the decorations from the platform and carried away the flags as souvenirs.

On Saturday suffragettes attempted to blow up Weatley Hall at Doncaster, owned by Sir William Cooke. The place was unoccupied. An unexploded bomb and suffragette literature were found under a stair case.

ONE KILLED, TWO SHOT AS RESULT OF FEUD

Davis Walker Slain by Jerry Perdue—Latter and W. H. Davis Are Wounded.

Hawkinsville, Ga., May 25.—Davis Walker, a farmer, was shot and killed by Jerry Perdue near here at 3 o'clock this morning. Perdue was shot through the thigh and W. H. Davis, a bystander, was shot in the neck, neither being wounded seriously.

The killing is said to be the outcome of ill feeling caused by the killing of Walker's father several months ago, for which Perdue was tried and acquitted.

Perdue came to Hawkinsville and surrendered. Walker is survived by a wife and four children.

CASE OF JAWOROWER STIRS B'RITH ABRAHAM

New York, May 26.—The Independent Order B'rith Abraham began here today its 27th annual convention with 1200 delegates from all parts of the country in attendance. Leon Sanderson, grand master, in his annual report said that 48 new lodges, with a membership of 13,182 had been created during the last year. The joint capital of all the lodges December 31, last he said, was $1,112,115. During the year $251,728 was expended in benefits to members.

The report went at length into an explanation of the case of Albert B. Jaworower, counsel for the order, recently sentenced to sing Sing prison for misappropriating $15,759 of the order. It said President Sanderson had given Jaworower time to make good the shortage and prosecution followed his failure to do so.

At the afternoon session when nominations for officers were in order interminglid hisses and cheering greeted the naming of Judge Sanderson for president. The opposition nominated Morris Rosenberg for president and Solomon Schalinski to oppose Jacob Schoen for grand secretary. The opposition to the president and grand secretary, it was said, grew out of the Jaworower affair.

The elections will take place on Tuesday.

Stefansson Begins Journey.

New York, May 25.—Vilhjalmar Stefansson, commander of the Canadian arctic expedition which will seek the "unknown continent" that scientists believe exists in the arctic, left this city tonight for Ottawa on the first stage of the journey to Victoria, where he will join the expedition.

"DRUNK" CHARGE ANGERS COLONEL

Roosevelt's Suit for $10,000 Against Editor to Begin Today—Colonel and His Friends Are in Marquette.

Marquette, Mich., May 25.—At 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the scales of justice will be weighted in the circuit court of Marquette county with the editorial assertion of Publisher George A. Newett that Theodore Roosevelt "gets drunk" and that not infrequently, on one side, and the latter's declaration that the charge is untrue and libelous, and the proper basis for punitive damages in the sum of $10,000, on the other.

Judge Richard C. Flanagan, of Norway, Mich., who will sit, was of the opinion tonight that as only four challenges are allowed each side, the jury might be sworn in before night.

The judge has reserved half of the main floor seats and the entire balcony for women.

The Roosevelt party is expected to arrive at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. Attorney Horace Andrews, of Cleveland, Ohio, and William B. Beldon, of Ishpeming, are plaintiff's counsel.

Colonel Roosevelt will be the guest of George Shiras, a naturalist, who has a big library of rare books of which Colonel Roosevelt is very fond.

Colonel Roosevelt will probably be the first witness put on the stand. Attorney Pound, chief of counsel for the plaintiff, arrived here tonight. He would not divulge his plan. By the nature of his statement the plaintiff is expected to call for all the evidence in the hands of the defense. This will open the way for the introduction of the mass of evidence gathered by the plaintiff.

Roosevelt on the Way.

Chicago, May 25.—Colonel Roosevelt reached Chicago from New York at 4 o'clock this afternoon and remained until 6:30, when he left for Marquette. The former president spent the time here in a visit to the animal house in Lincoln park, accompanied by Edmund Heller, the naturalist.

James R. Garfield, former secretary of the interior; Frank Pyne, United States marshal for West Virginia, and who was President Roosevelt's bodyguard, and Robert Bacon, former secretary of state, who will testify for Colonel Roosevelt, are in the party.

JAPANESE EMPEROR STEADILY IMPROVES

Tokio, May 26.—The condition of Emperor Yoshihito was so favorable Sunday he received in audience several state officials. The bulletins issued by the attending attending physicians will probably be suspended in view of the steady improvement.

The bulletin issued this morning indicated normal conditions. The temperature was 98.78, pulse 72, respiration 22.

Washington, May 25.—Gratification was expressed in official circles here today over the news of the marked improvement in the condition of the Japanese emperor. Latest reports from the emperor's bedside indicated that he was steadily gaining strength and might be well again in a few weeks. There were no developments today either at the embassy or at the state department in connection with the negotiations concerning the California land legislation.

Does Theodore Roosevelt Get Drunk?

Colonel Roosevelt canceled all other engagements to go to Marquette, Mich., to press his suit for libel against George Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, a trade paper. In an article published in the heat of the last presidential campaign, Mr. Newett's publication charged that Colonel Roosevelt "curses, lies and gets drunk frequently, and all his friends know this." The former president denied that he drank, and stated he would press the suit against the Michigan publisher. Editor Newett stuck to his charges and said he was prepared with affidavits to prove his case when the suit came to trial on May 26. Lawrence Abbott, of The Outlook staff, paper writers, who were with the colonel for years, and several secret service men and stenographers. Bowers & Sands, of 21 Nassau street, counsel for Colonel Roosevelt in New York, have been collecting affidavits signed by friends of the colonel in the east, who are unable to make the trip to Marquette. James R. Pound, of Marquette, will represent the colonel in court. The defense, it was said, would make an attempt to show that Colonel Roosevelt was intoxicated when he made a speech in Duluth, Mich., last summer, and that there would be evidence also about a dinner given at Washington by ex-Congressman Cannon.

NATIONAL BANKS TO LOAN ON FARMS

That Is a Feature of Currency Bill Being Prepared by President Wilson and the Democratic Leaders.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, May 25.—(Special.)—The administration currency bill which is being worked out by Representative Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the house banking curency committee, in accordance with the views of President Wilson, will contain a provision that is expected to prove of great help to farming communities.

It will permit national banks to make loans on farm mortgages. The details have not been perfected, but some method of this kind which will reduce the farmer's interest charges will be drawn. At present only state and private banks can make loans on real estate.

Another important section relates to the keeping of reserves. Banks are now required to keep 15 per cent of their deposit liabilities in lawful money, but 9 per cent may be kept in reserve and central reserve cities. If regional curency associations are provided for in the bill, these reserves must be kept in the association to which the bank belongs. Mr. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, is opposed to this provision, taking the viewpoint of the New York and Chicago bankers, who believe the change would be unwise and would not help the banks in the interior.

A federal reserve board to sit at Washington and which will have the final decision on the value of securities will take the place in the democratic scheme of the Aldrich central reserve association.

BRYAN IS PRAISED FOR BARRING WINE

Washington, May 25.—Praise for Secretary Bryan for "the courage of his convictions" in refusing to serve wine at a dinner he gave recently to the diplomatic corps was given by Secretary Daniels today in addressing a Sunday school rally for prohibition in the District of Columbia. He advised all young men to follow Secretary Bryan's course and to seek safely in total abstinence. Secretary Daniels also lauded Theodore Roosevelt for prosecuting for libel an editor accused of circulating stories relative to drinking on the part of the former president.

Camp Leaves Tuesday.

The Joseph Brown Camp of Confederate Veterans will leave Atlanta for Chattanooga, Tenn., Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, via the Western and Atlantic for the annual reunion.

1,000 ITALIANS FALL IN FIGHT WITH ARABS

Italian Forces Lured Into Carefully Set Trap and Then Shot Down.

Chiasso, Switzerland, May 25.—The strict censorship which the Italian government has imposed on all news relating to the state of affairs in Tripoli and particularly with regard to the defeat of the Italian forces at Sidi Garba on May 16 has made it difficult to obtain exact information on the recent reverses in that territory. It has been learned, however, that the disaster at Sidi Garba was due to a well-laid plan of the Arabs.

An Italian workman named Machiavelli, who had been taken prisoner by the Arabs, was allowed to escape after being carefully primed with false information which he carried to General Ganbretti. Instead of waiting to carry out a scheme of cooperation with General Tassoni, who was on his way from Benghazi with a strong force, General Ganbretti, on the strength of Machiavelli's report that the number of the enemy was small, decided to attack alone.

He divided his 3,000 men in three columns which were supported by four guns and a battery of howitzers. After the first flush of victory the Italian soldiers were resting when suddenly each column was set upon from front and rear and cut off from the others. At the same time they were subjected to a heavy shell fire.

The Italians showed admirable courage and endurance. Some of the companies lost all their officers. One advance detachment lost thirty-six out of forty men, and it was soon apparent that retreat alone would save the forces from annihilation. Colonel Magdalena was shot and as he lay dying wrote a report praising his men and recommending for promotion his major who, although twice wounded, took command.

General Ganbretti, on his return to Derna, said:

"It was the bloodiest day of the whole Italo-Turkish war."

The Italian losses are estimated at 1,000.

PLOT AGAINST LIFE OF PRESIDENT GOMEZ

According to the latest information from Caracas the intention was to kill the president on May 25 at the horse races at Paralso, a suburb of Caracas.

Rumors of a revolutionary movement in Venezuela are current, but the newspapers and the citizens are cautiously avoiding open discussion of the situation.

GRAY AND GRIZZLED VETS OF LOST CAUSE

Gathering at Chattanooga for Annual Reunion — Formal Opening Tuesday — Scenes of Activity at Camp Stewart.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 25.—Incoming trains today and tonight brought hundreds of veterans and visitors to the twenty-third annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans, which will be formally opened here Tuesday morning. Many of those who arrived today came to attend preliminary meetings scheduled for tomorrow. These sessions included a welcome meeting of the Confederate Memorial association tomorrow afternoon and the opening meeting of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, tomorrow evening.

Chattanooga is in gala attire in honor of the momentous occasion. Bunting and flags, both federal and confederate, adorn the buildings on the principal streets. Tonight a myriad of vari-colored electric lights glittered and sparkled throughout the business section of the city.

Visiting Bands Scenes.

Interest of those arriving early centers largely in visits to the scenes of some of the most important battles during the war between the states. The government has established a national park where the famous battle of Chickamauga was fought. In this struggle more than 100,000 confederate and federal soldiers are said to have been engaged. More than 16,000 perished on each side before the engagement ceased.

General Sherman also started from Chattanooga on his "march to the sea," and it was in this vicinity that the battle of Missionary Ridge and the celebrated "battle above the clouds" were waged. The scenes of Andrews' raid, the battle of Ringgold Gap and other noted engagements are within a short distance of this city.

The United States government and many individual states have expended large sums in beautifying and marking these historic sites. During the present reunion monuments erected on Chickamauga battlefield by the states of Alabama and Florida will be unveiled. More than 200 monuments and 400 markers already have been erected, including those by the states of Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and South Carolina.

At Camp Stewart.

Scenes of activity began late today at Camp Stewart, where a white city

NEW WITNESSES IN PHAGAN CASE FOUND BY POLICE

Reported Two Telephone Operators Will Swear to Conversations Held Over the Pencil Factory's Line.

GAVE THEIR TESTIMONY BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

A. S. Colyar Confers With Chief Beavers on Bribery Allegations—Case Now in Its Infancy, Says Chief.

With the entire city aroused over the recent sensational Felder bribery charges and counter charges of graft and corruption in the police department, investigation of the Mary Phagan mystery continues. Police headquarters was elated Sunday over the progress and over new developments which have arisen.

New testimony has been given by girl telephone operators relative to conversations which were held over the pencil factory's line on the night of the tragedy, Chief Lanford says. Secrecy shrouds the nature of the alleged conversations. No one acquainted with the evidence will talk. It is hinted to be the strongest yet secured.

No one acquainted with the evidence will talk. It is hinted to be the strongest yet unearthed.

Coupled with this development comes the rumor of a telephone call reported to have been made on the Friday morning preceding the murder, in which Mary Phagan is said to have been instructed to come to the pencil factory Friday afternoon to obtain her pay envelope. Detectives will neither deny nod admit that the rumor has been confirmed.

Phone Message to Pope.

J. B. Pope, of Bellwood avenue, a county policeman and neighbor of the slain girl, to whom the rumored telephone message was made, could not be reached last night by The Constitution. Mrs. Pope says she knows nothing of the report, but says numerous calls came to her home for Mary Phagan and members of her family.

A. S. Colyar, the soldier of fortune and acknowledged instigator of the tribery trap, came to police headquarters Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock and held an hour's conference with Chief Beavers. They were closeted in the latter's office, and, upon emerging, neither would disclose the nature of their consultation.

It is freely reported, however, that the solicitor has something new up his sleeve, and that he will play a leading role in the charges to be made in alleged new bribery attempts. He stated that on Monday he would expose others than Colonel Felder and the men he has already attacked. Chief C. W. Tobie, it is said, is to be included in his attack today.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton superintendent, and Detective John Black, of Pinkerton fame, again tried Sunday to break the testimony of the negro Conley, who confessed to having written notes at the dictation of Frank, and which are believed to have been the murder missives found beside the dead girl's body. He stoutly maintained his original tale as explained in his affidavit, and a strenuous third degree failed to swerve it.

Wife Will Assist Colyar.

Mrs. A. S. Colyar, wife of the bribery accuser, who has been in Atlanta for several weeks, left the city Sunday afternoon for her home in Cartersville, where she goes to get papers relating to her husband's past and supporting his charges. She will return soon, it is said, to assist him in his fight against Colonel Felder.

"This is not the end," Colyar said at headquarters. "It is only the beginning. Whenever I start a fight like this, the results are many and widespread, and it can be depended upon that there will be a general clean-up before we are through."

Chief Beavers, in talking with a reporter for The Constitution, echoed Colyar's expression regarding the extent of the probe proposed into alleged bribery practices in the Phagan murder.

"This thing is only in its infancy. It first began as an individual exposure. Now that it has been a political plaything, we are going to reveal the infamy of others. It won't take long to do it, either. Some folks are going to be driven to disgrace. They'd do well to get out of town before the bomb bursts."

Thinks Tobie Victimized.

When asked if he intended attacking the character of Chief Tobie, of the Burns agency, as has been rumored, Chief Lanford declared:

"I have nothing against Tobie. He doesn't seem to be badly mixed up in this affair. I think he, too, has been victimized. He was unfortunate in becoming attached to the operations of the wrong person, and naturally will have to suffer the consequences. In fact, I feel a certain degree of pity for Tobie. He's unfortunate—exceedingly unfortunate."

Evidently Chief Lanford attaches great importance to the reported testimony of the two telephone girls regarding the midnight conversations. His only verification of the rumor is that he knows of the existence of such testimony. Beyond that, he will say absolutely nothing, except that he "understands" the two girls went before the grand jury during its Friday morning session.

It is a known rule of the telephone exchange which prevents operators from revealing conversations they overhear except when placed under oath. Chief Lanford says that this is the reason why the two operators were sent before the grand jury. Their identity is as secret as the nature of their testimony. Solicitor Dorsey would make no statement regarding the girls.

Chief Beavers and Colyar would not admit to a Constitution reporter whether or not their conference Sunday was for the purpose of planning some move to expose other suspected bribe practices. "They were only talking things over," they said. Anyway, the "talking over" was done in utmost secrecy behind locked doors with a uniformed policeman on guard in the ante-room.

War to End, Says Chief.

The chief reiterated his fiery denunciation which he made Saturday night and in which he promised to break the backbone of the "vice gang" which he charges is in existence and which he declares has been too long in political rule. It is war to the bitter finish, he said.

Signed by Allan Pinkerton, principal of the Pinkerton agency, a statement has been issued by the organization denying certain statements regarding their operations which appeared in a statement of Colonel Felder. The Pinkerton denial is as follows:

"In the issue of May 25 of The Constitution there appears an article said to be a statement of Attorney Thomas B. Felder under the following caption: 'Thomas B. Felder Brands the Charges of Bribery a Diabolical Conspiracy,' in which the name of Pinkerton's National Detective agency frequently appears.

"Those statements, insofar as they refer to the Pinkerton agency, are absolutely without an iota of truth, as the Pinkertons had absolutely no previous knowledge or information concerning or pertaining to the issue between certain Atlanta civic officials and Attorney Felder, and the agency's first knowledge of these issues, or in connection therewith, came through newspaper publications of May 25.

"We respectfully request that you give this, our denial, in connection with the statements referred to, as equal prominence as that which you gave the published article in question in your issue.

"PINKERTON'S NATIONAL DETECTIVE AGENCY.

(Signed) "By ALLAN PINKERTON."

GRAY AND GRIZZLED VETS OF LOST CAUSE

of tents has been erected for the visiting veterans. Headquarters of the three departments and eighteen divisions of the veterans' organization already have been established, and the registration of visitors has begun. Division and department tents are distinguished from the host of others by banners or streamers bearing the names of the divisions and the names of the commanders.

Living and "mess" tents were tendered by the United States government for the use of the veterans, and Camp Stewart strongly resembles Uncle Sam's "army city" near the Mexican border.

An interesting program of social entertainments, business sessions and impressive street pageants has been arranged for the three days of the reunion. None of these events is looked forward to with keener anticipation than the parade of the veterans Thursday morning. Since the first reunion the march of the rapidly aging veterans to the strains of "Dixie" and their frequent "rebel yells" has been the feature of their annual gatherings.

General Young Arrives.

General Bennet H. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, and Colonel Dale P. Kyle, of General Young's staff, arrived in Chattanooga today, and in company with Captain J. F. Shipp, made a tour of Camp Stewart and along the principal streets where special preparations have been made for entertainment of the visiting soldiers and their friends during the three days of the twenty-third confederate reunion, beginning Tuesday.

"I have attended every reunion since the Association of Confederate Veterans was formed," said General Young, "and I declare that I have never seen preparations in any city where we have been entertained that surpass or even equal what I have seen in Chattanooga today.

"Captain Shipp took Colonel Kyle and myself through Camp Stewart this afternoon and I see that Chattanooga will offer no disappointment to the veterans, for everything is ideal even to the most minute detail.

"You are going to have 150,000 people in Chattanooga—I say this after conferring with railroad officials and judging the crowds of Tuesday from those coming in today.

"The city's decorations strike me as being the most artistic and the most extensively placed that I ever saw in any city of population comparable to that of Chattanooga."

Colonel Kyle was equally as enthusiastic in his compliments of Camp Stewart. Colonel Kyle is the confederate commander in chief's "right hand" man, and has already assumed engagements which promise to keep him quite as busy as any of the leading confederate officers during the reunion.

General Young has part of the Andrew Jackson suite at the Patten hotel.

FRANK IS GUILTY, SAYS PINKERTON

Sufficient Evidence Found to Convict Him, Declares Man Hired by the National Pencil Company.

Announcing that he had secured evidence sufficient to convict his employer, Harry Scott, assistant superintendent of the Pinkertons, who has been retained by the National Pencil company since the second day of the Phagan tragedy, said to a reporter for The Constitution Sunday night that it was his intention to help prosecute the suspected superintendent.

Scott has been in command of the Pinkerton forces working the investigation. His employment came about in answer to a telephone call from Frank on Monday morning following the murder. He was engaged, he states, for the sole purpose of finding the murderer.

Scott's Connection With Case.

His connection with the case was explained once before when he was called to the stand at the coroner's inquest. The Constitution Sunday morning published an exclusive story explaining that although Scott was employed by Frank's defense, and although reports of the Pinkertons' daily progress were submitted to the prisoner's counsel, he was working on the theory that Frank was guilty.

Scott declared to The Constitution over the telephone Sunday night that he was convinced of the suspect's guilt, and that he had evidence to that effect, which would be submitted before the courts. The Pinkertons' investigation, however, will not cease, he says, but will continue as relentlessly as heretofore. Because of strict jail regulations, Frank could not be reached last night for a statement regarding the detective's announcement.

As the assistant superintendent stated on the witness stand during the inquest, he was summoned to Frank's office on Monday afternoon, April 28, to confer with Frank. Frank, he says, asserted that it was due the pencil factory to investigate the murder.

Pinkertons Start Work.

Scott and his men immediately set to work. The following day the plant superintendent was arrested. The Pinkerton investigation proceeded on the theory that Frank was guilty, it is stated by Scott. Later, authorities of the pencil factory were consulted. The Pinkertons, it is said, asked if they were to continue their investigation as originally outlined—to find the murderer, or would they be expected to assist Frank? In the latter case, it is said, the detective officials declared, they would cease connection.

According to Luther Z. Rosser, counsel for Frank, and Superintendent Scott, the Pinkertons were instructed to proceed as in the past and to find the slayer. Scott says he has evidence not yet made public—and that it will not be revealed until time of trial.

Animal Morality.

Now listen, little Nancy, to my highly moral tale
Though man declares himself creation's king
There are many gentle animals could make his boastings fall.
That never "sow wild oats" nor "have their fling."

This rail-bird has no dealings with the wicked railroad folk;
Has naught to do with jail-birds or with steel;
A shot may rake it off a noble elm tree, or an oak,
But it never got a rake-off on a deal.

Observe this queer contraption with the curious hop-and-crouch.
Its young 'uns in a little bag perceive!
The kangaroo oft carries deuce or trey within its pouch,
But it never carries aces up its sleeve.

This elephant is so big and high, and seeming so aleof,
Will gladly take a peanut from your hoard;
Should you cruelly feed it pepper, it might smash you 'gainst the roof.
But it never left its trunk to jump its board.

Now mark this sow, surrounded by her higgle-piggle mess;
By passing pails her interest is aroused.
A sow may be somewhat inclined toward greed, I must confess,
But you never saw a sow e-getting soused.

Here, in this cage, on peanut shells an old ape sadly dines.
Two mischief makers bit him with a cup.
You may often see the monkeys cutely cutting monkey-shines,
But you never see one going home lit up!

Within this oblong, shadowed tank, like churchman in his pew;
There sleeps a fat electric eel so pure,
He might upon occasion shock a fisherman or two,
But would never shock you modesty, I'm sure.

Yes, Nancy, dear, from each and all we learn; from little dogs
We learn the tail should never wag the pup;
From bears, to bear and forbear; to keep cool, from swimming frogs,
And from the lowly oyster, to shut up.

Pull the Blind! Get behind! Listen here, That's one clear call for me!
Hully gee—just for me?—yes, for me! But—
Crossin' the bar, kid; take it from pa, kid;
There ain't a-gonna to be no moan; Well!
CHORUS:
Crossin' the bar—here we are, here we are—
It's a bar, it's a bar, it's a bar!
In a scoop, in a yawl—should we worry at all
Yo! Ho! Put in the oar;
Kiss me, girls, I'm a-leavin' the shore;
An' the tide's too full for a sound or a foam—
By, by, people—regards back home;

WOOL TRUST CHIEF IS ON TRIAL

Manufacturers and labor chiefs all over the country watched the trial of William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen company; Frederick E. Atteaux, a Boston manufacturer, and Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, charged with conspiracy in "planting" dynamite during the Lawrence textile strike tin January, 1912, to discredit the strikers. Collins turned state's evidence, and other evidence was produced which was damaging to the defense. Wood and Atteaux entered a general denial. Coming on top of the McNamara exposures in Los Angeles, the finding of the dynamite at Lawrence created great excitement at the time, and the strikers were at first condemned in public estimation. The fact that it was alleged that the explosive was deliberately "planted" to discredit the strikers created a greater sensation. The trial of the case hung fire for a long time, but the public awaited the outcome with renewed interest when the three defendants faced the court.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN VICTIMS OF HORROR

Long Beach, Cal., May 25.—Prospective damage suits aggregating probably $1,000,000 or more, and a grand jury investigation, engaged the attention of city officials today as the most imminent outcome of the disaster yesterday when 35 persons lost their lives in the collapse of a portion of the municipal pier just after the close of the British "Empire day" pageant.

The death list, which numbered 33 last night, was added to by the death of Mrs. E. C. Bush, 70 years old, of Long Beach, this afternoon, and that of Mrs. McDonald, an aged woman, late today.

The list is expected to be further increased by tomorrow by the death of Marguerite Reed, aged 12, of Long Beach, whose back was broken, and of William Cooper, of Pasadena, one of the two veterans of the Crimean war, who were in the van of the Empire day parade.

Only One Man Killed.

Rectification of errors made yesterday in the list of dead brought out the following names:

MISS FRANCES HARRIET NEWELL, Kenosha, Wis.

MRS. MOLLIE CATES, Oakpark, Ill.

MISS LILLY M. HOLME, Denver, Colo.

ERNEST G. EALES, Los Angeles.

MRS. EALES, his wife.

MRS. M. P. McDONALD, Compton, Cal.

Eales was the only man killed, and his body remained unidentified until late today, as well as that of his wife.

Public officers conferred today with District Attorney John D. Fredericks, with reference to the grand jury inquiry to be started either on or just before the coroner's inquest Tuesday. The object of the inquiry is to fix responsibility for the condition of the pier, a section of which went down under a weight of human beings estimated at less than 750 tons.

On the order of the district attorney officers were placed on guard this morning over the ruined section of the pier, instructed to keep watch constantly in twelve hour shifts until relieved, and to allow no tampering with any part of the structure. Several broken timbers which are expected to show the general condition of the pier were taken out of the pier today and locked up under official seal.

Weakness of the Pier.

The weakness of the pier, which was built eight years ago, and never repaired in that particular portion, is believed to have been due to decay caused by the action of salt atmosphere on wood and its iron fasteners and supports. However, it was declared that a much stronger structure might have been wrecked in the same circumstances as the participants in the big parade marched upon the pier in step. Military men pointed out that the rhythmetic vibration created by the measured tread of thousands of feet caused a tremendous strain upon the supports which already had been heavily burdened by the crowd about the auditorium doors awaiting admittance.

The grand jury investigation was demanded by the officers of the United Societies of British Born Residents and visitors, whose celebration of Queen Victoria's birthday anniversary was interrupted by the accident. City Attorney Long answered reports of the prospective damage suits with the statement that in his opinion the city could not be held responsible for the deaths and injuries because no charge had been made by the city for the use of the municipal amusement property. Use of the pier and auditorium had been given without cost and the celebrators, he said, had used it at their own risk.

All but the most seriously injured were removed to their homes in Los Angeles and neighboring cities today.

The total number of injured probably never will be known accurately. About 85, however, were seriously hurt.

Affection.

Talk not of wasted affection,
Affection never was wasted:
If it enrich not the heart of another,
Its waters, returning
Back to their spring, like the rain,
shall fill them full of refreshment;
That which the fountain sends forth returns again to the fountain.

TURKEY CEDES CYPRUS TO GREAT BRITAIN

London, May 26.—Turkey has definitely ceded the island of Cyprus to Great Britain, according to the Constantinople correspondent of the Express who claims to have received a formal statement to that effect from the best informed source. The cession of the island is said to have been due to clauses in the Anglo-Turkish entente.

The allies informed Osman Nizami Pasha at a joint meeting of the Balkan and Ottoman peace delegates today that they had no intention of asking for further modification of the peace terms already put forward. This is regarded as an important step in the direction of peace.

Today Is the Day.

"Good days and bad days exist only in your own head. The weather has nothing to do with it. Each day is what you make it for yourself. Bad weather is only an unfortunate opinion.

"Suppose it is raining pitchforks. You get word that your salary has been doubled or that a forgotten uncle has left you $1,000,000. What do you care about the weather time? Or suppose the person you love is dying. Unexpectedly a turn for the better comes. The doctor says your dear one will live. What if it is hotter than Tophet? It is a good day, a great day, a happy day.

"It's what you think and feel about it that makes each day what it is. You, within yourself, can make each day, every day a good da. Put down in the note book of your soul the poet Runeberg's thought:

"'Each da is a life.'

"When you get up in the morning throw back your shoulders, take a deep breath. Meet the new day like a man. Say to yourself:

"'Another day—another life!'

"For all we know it may be the only day we'll ever have. Let's make it the best day we can. Let's strive to see that it is a day worth while. Let's move a step forward in our work. Let's do all the good we can. Let's get all the happiness we can—today.

"Right now is the only time you can control. Yesterday is a record. Tomorrow is a secret. Today is yours, is mine."

Dry Cleaning Fabrics.

While the so-called "dry cleaning" methods usually require special machinery and some technical skill, the following formula, according to The Pharmaceutical Era, will produce a dry-cleaning soap which can be worked by anyone: Oleic acid, 5 parts (by weight); caustic potash, 1 part; dissolve in methylater spirit, 4 parts (by weight). These proportions produce a slightly superfatted soap, freely soluble in gasoline. A brush dipped in gasoline and rubbed on this soap dissolves enough to produce a plentiful lather when brushing the goods. This is the general type of most of the so-called dry cleaners on the market, such soaps being used for the dual purpose of assisting the cleaning process and to minimize the risk of fire.

PROBE IS DEMANDED FOR WEST VIRGINIA

Debs and Berger Declare That the Mob Rules Under Guise of Law.

Charleston, W. Va., May 25.—The committee of socialists sent here by the national committee of the party to investigate conditions in the coal regions tonight sent a telegram to Senator Kern urging the passage of the senator's resolution for a federal probe into the West Virginia situation. The message to Senator Kern follows:

"It is imperative that the Kern resolution do pass. Conditions have improved considerably under Governor Hatfield's administration, but there is no doubt that the federal constitution was set aside in the coal regions. The fundamental rights of citizenship were denied, papers were suppressed, and postal laws ignored.

"Under the guise of law the military and civil authorities substituted mob law for constitutional government. Armored trains with machine guns poured deadly fire into defenseless homes. The state owes the nation a searching investigation of the long reign of lawlessness in the mining region of West Virginia.

"(Signed)

"EUGENE V. DEBS,
"ADOLPH GERMER,
"VICTOR L. BERGER."

The committee will leave here tomorrow for Chicago, where it will probably make a report to the national committee of the socialist party.

Haywood Talks to Strikers.

Paterson, N. J., May 25.—At the usual Sunday meeting of the silk mill strikers today just outside of the city limits, a large gathering of strikers and sympathizers listened to speeches by the Industrial Workers of the World leaders. William D. Haywood made the strong feature of his speech the necessity for strikers picketing the mills. A meeting of broad silk weavers is scheduled for tomorrow to determine whether they shall return to work Tuesday.

ROBERTS PROPHESIES PRESBYTERIAN UNITY

Stated Clerk of Northern Assembly Speaks at Harris Street Church.

Rev. William H. Roberts, D.D., LL.D., of Philadelphia, spoke Sunday morning at the Harris Street Presbyterian church. Dr. Roberts is one of the most distinguished leaders of the northern Presbyterian church, having been for thirty years stated secretary of the general assembly, and for 25 years American secretary of the World's Presbyterian alliance, the tenth annual conference of which he will attend in Aberdeen, Scotland, June 18.

Dr. Roberts' sermon Sunday morning was upon "The Characteristics of the Presbyterian Church As They Are Related to the Welfare of the American Nation."

Work of Church of Scotland.

*In his introductory remarks Dr. Rob*erts showed how the church of Scotland by its fidelity to Presbyterian ideas of faith and conduct, had been a potent power in the development of the Scottish nation and how that nation also had imparted to the Scotch church much of its own rugged strength, forceful integrity and vigorous life. *In an historical sketch of the Presby*terian church in America, Dr. Roberts pointed out that in the organization of the general presbytery in Philadelphia in 1706, the Presbyterian church, in the establishment of the principles upon which the national government is founded, had antedated by three quarters of a century the continental congress.

In indicating the influence of the spirituality of the church upon the welfare of the nation, Dr. Roberts said:

"Salvation is from sin to righteousness, righteousness first in the individual, and then through the individual in society. This is not the way of the worldly man, in the work of securing human welfare. He prefers to begin on the outside, to deal solely with things external. His methods are chiefly those of legislation, and his weapons are those of compulsion. Spirituality as a quality of the mind and heart he knows nothing about. He understands dollars, and laws, and the use of force, but not souls. How tian churches. They know the value of souls, the purpose of Christ, the reality of things spiritual, the power of persuasion backed by the Holy Ghost. The word spirituality stands for the men who use the things of earth as stepping stones to higher and heavenly things."

Foresees Unity.

Dr. Roberts foresaw the day when the Presbyterian branches "will be united into one church. "Divisions there have been in the church," he said, "but they sooner or later have been, or will be, healed. The spirit of our church is the spirit of unity, and today this spirit is widely disseminated in our land."

Dr. Roberts told of the aggressive and missionary spirit of the church, and urged a more zealous cultivation of this spirit.

In concluding his sermon, he said: "Not the least of things characteristic of our church has been its defense and dissemination of the truth of God as the supreme standard of human conduct and the vitalizing power of the republic. This nation owes an incalculable debt to the Presbyterian, and some other churches, for the tenacity and vigor with which they have maintained the fundamentals of the Christian system of truth."

WILSON WORRIED BY LABOR CLAUSE

President's Mind Not Made Up Regarding Provision Vetoed by Taft—Situation Reaching Interesting Period

Washington, May 25.—President Wilson may have actually before him this week for his approval or rejection the much bufeted $117,000,000 sundry civil appropriation bill, which includes the provision exempting labor unions and farmers' organizations from prosecution through funds appropriated for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law.

What the president will do with the measure because of the exemption clause, which caused former President Taft to veto it, is engaging country-wide attention, and it is reported tonight that the chief executive has not made up his mind what to do with the bill.

Although the bill is in conference, there being a disagreement over a senate amendment relating to funds for a national soldiers' home, President Wilson has had it under consideration for many weeks. During the week just passed, the executive's office has been flooded with letters and petitions regarding the measure, which urged him in emphatic language to veto it because of the exemption clause, and others appealing to him to give it his approval.

While the president is deliberating the house and senate conferees have been marking time, but it is probable they will reach an agreement during the week and that their report will be approved by house and senate. This will put the matter directly up to the president. Party leaders on both sides are awaiting the president's action with interest without making any predictions. Some time ago it was indicated that the president would sign the bill and issue a statement regarding the exemption clause. Now, however, he is said to be seriously studying both sides of the controverted points before determining the matter.

The Tariff Situation.

The tariff situation will reach an interesting period during this week, when the senate finance sub-committees get down to the actual work of writing their revisions of the Underwood bill. When the private hearings close Tuesday the three sub-committees, headed by Senators Stone, Williams and Johnson, will lock themselves up, roll up their sleeves, and begin to sift through the mass of material procured in the private hearings and through briefs filed with them by protesting manufacturers. Although Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, had hoped that the work of revising the schedules could be concluded this week, there is little prospect of it, and the bill probably will not be ready for the democratic caucus until the week following.

Senator Williams' subcommittee will take up the insurance feature of the income tax section of the bill tomorrow, when Darwin P. Kingley, president of the New York Life insurance company, appears on behalf of the insurance interests.

Another matter to occupy this subcommittee will be the amendments to the administrative features of the bill proposed by Assistant Attorney General Denison and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis. The amendments being seriously considered are one to give the secretary of the treasury the right to proclaim valuations in ad valorem goods and another to prohibit attorneys taking up disputed cases on a contingent fee basis.

Annual Saving of $1,200,000.

In support of these amendments the government officials have filed with the senate subcommittee a brief on the subject in which it is maintained that $1,200,000 is not an unreasonable estimate as an annual saving that might be effected as a result of their adoption. It is pointed out that the refunds of duties aggregated in each of the fiscal years 1911 and 1912 approximately $1,500,000. Half of this, the brief says, usually goes to the importers as velvet, and the other half to attorneys and brokers.

"It is intimated," says the brief, "that 30 per cent of this may be saved, but call it $1,000,000. The expense of the structure of litigation the board $185,000 and the staff of the department of justice $80,000 are annually $265,000, of which three-fifths might be a saving of one-half, but call it $100,000. The expenses of the appraising service of the treasury department aggregate nearly $2,000,000 a year, of which some undoubtedly will be saved. It is impossible to estimate how much, call it one-tenth of $200,000. Total saving for the year $1,200,000."

The brief further sets forth in detail that the amount of refunds at the port of New York alone due to litigation over customs ascertained for the years 1908 and 1913 to April 30, inclusive, $5,977,000.

6. O. P. Reorganization.

Overshadowing the legislative developments during the last week was the beginning made by republican party leaders in and out of congress to bring about party reorganization, culminating in the meeting Saturday of the republican executive committee and the organization plans of the democratic national and congressional committees. Following these conferences both republican and democratic national committees will meet soon to organize and work out details for the campaign next year.

This week the committee of five senators appointed by the senate republican conference to confer with house leaders relating to a joint caucus to talk over congressional plans, will begin work, and Senator Gallinger, the chairman, is authority for the statement that a caucus will be held early in June. The republican congressional committee has deferred its organization meeting until the executive committee of the national committee has met, so as not to interfere with any harmonious arrangement of work between the two organizations. The congressional organization leaders are agreed that if the national committee executive members did not immediately establish headquarters, the congressional campaign headquarters would be arranged for at once, publicity work planned and other details attended to looking to the convention of the election of representatives in 1914. The congressional committee probably will have offices in Washington, but later will establish headquarters at New York and Chicago.

Increased Senate Representation.

The leaders of both democratic and congressional committees are discussing the question of increased representation vote and the sentiment in both committees apparently favors such an increase, though not to any such extent as would allow the senators, only a third of whom are elected every two years, to dictate to the representatives, all of whom are elected biennially. The house leaders avow the purpose of keeping the reins of their committees in their own hands.

Sentiation of the senate in view of the coming direct elections of senators by Representatives James F. Burke, of Pennsylvania, now republican whip of the house and vice chairman of the republican congressional committee, is a leading possibility for the chairmanship to succeed former Representative William B. McKinley, of Illinois, though Mr. Burke is said to be disinclined to take the office. Republican Leader Mann is especially favorable to Mr. Burke, though Representatives Gardner, of Massachusetts, and Madden, of Illinois, and others who figure in the chairmanship problem, are all acceptable to Mr. Mann. Mr. McKinley, former Speaker Cannon, Representative Payne, of New York, and former Representative Dwight, of New York, talked over the situation at the capitol today.

Joint Campaign Plans.

Representative Lloyd, of Missouri, chairman of the democratic congressional committee, returned today from New York, and early next week will confer with the representatives of the senate and of the democratic national committee regarding the increased senatorial representation question and joint campaign preliminary plans. Representative Johnson, of Kentucky, is still in the lead for the chairmanship despite reports of his withdrawal. Mr. Johnson all along has stated that he would not accept the office if his election came about in any other than a dignified way with no scramble whatever. Representative Lloyd's re-election over his announcement is taken in view of his long service the chairmanship honors should go to someone else, is a possibility in the event of Mr. Johnson's non-election. Mr. Lloyd is not a candidate, but has never stated that he would decline if re-elected.

DAIRIES AND MARKETS OF AMERICUS EXAMINED

Americus, Ga., May 25.—Dr. P. H. Ralnsen and Dr. Hutchens, of the state veterinary department, and Dr. P. H. Methoin, of the pure food department, are in Americus today, and will continue Monday, with Dr. Wade Chambliss, chairman of the Americus board of health and city physician, the careful inspection begun yesterday of all of the slaughter houses, the cattle contained therein, the city meat markets and public dairies. Several places were inspected yesterday and the work will be concluded tomorrow and recommendations made to city council regarding their findings of conditions here.

Only one dairy was inspected yesterday, and this was found in excellent condition, as were all the cows belonging thereto. The officials came to Americus by request, and only as an extra precautionary measure at this season of summer. There has been not a case of illness of any nature resulting from any of the sources mentioned, but the board of health desired to be absolutely assured that sanitary conditions here were of the best, or to make them so.

CHRISTIANS ARE FEWER THAN NON-CHRISTIANS

Detroit, Mich., May 25.—"A study of twelve large American cities shows that in but one of them do communicants of christian bodies—protestant and Catholic combined—equal the non-christian population," declared Rev. Lathan A. Crandall, of Minneapolis, today in his annual sermon to the Northern Baptist convention in session here. He dwelt for some time on his declaration that the non-christian population of the United States has attained almost unbelievable proportions.

The Chautauqua has been a success, and arrangements have already been made to repeat it next year. The city is indebted to the enterprise of the local Federation of Woman's clubs for the week's entertainment.

Thomasville Schools.

Thomasville, Ga., May 25.—(Special.) The commencement exercises of the Thomasville public schools began today with the preaching of the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. W. M. Harris at the Baptist church tonight. The eighteen graduates occupied the front seats of the church and a large congregation was present to listen to the able sermon delivered. The other exercises of these schools will take place during the week, the graduation exercises being on Friday evening.

"Thousands in Atlanta Living the Life of Mary Phagan's Murderer"

—Rev. W. W. Memminger

"Thousands of people in Atlanta are living the lives today that the murderer of Mary Phagan lived, and which culminated in the atrocious crime," declared Rev. W. W. Memminger, pastor of All Saints' Episcopal church, in a sermon yesterday morning which he devoted in great part to pleading for a better standard of morals in the daily life of man and woman.

The woman who uses paint and powder, who dances the turkey trot and who dresses in a suggestive manner came in for scathing remarks from the rector, but the man who boasts of being the stronger sex and yet bends his efforts to tearing down woman's standard, instead of, upholding and protecting virtue and purity, was given even greater blame.

"Women are wrong to adopt any suggestive manner of dress or to use paint and powder which for hundreds of years has been the mark and symbol of a certain type of women," said the pastor, "and I agree with the church councils which have passed resolutions deprecating it."

The Story of Nathan.

Mr. Memminger took up the story of Nathan, the prophet, who went to David shortly after the latter committed his terrible crime, and told him the tale of the rich man, with hundreds of lambs in his flock, and of the poor man, who owned but one ewe lamb, and how the rich man when he desired to entertain a wayfarer slew not one of his many, but the single lamb of the poor man.

The story goes that David, on hearing the telling, was highly indignant, and ordered that the rich man should be forced to pay the poor man fourfold. Nathan then said to him, "Thou art the man."

"Despite the horror at this crime and the detestation felt for the murderer," said the rector, "there are today thousands in Atlanta to whom Nathan might declare, 'Thou art the man.'

"The besetting sin of today," he continued, "is not so much the love of money or the disregard of the poor, as it is the love of women and the ease with which we yield to the lusts of the flesh."

Mr. Memminger then referred to the enormous amount of unfaithfulness to the marriage tie that is shown daily in newspapers and court records, and declared that certain deep thinkers are debating the entire system of marriage.

Man Worthy of Contempt.

Taking up the subject of placing the blame for these conditions, the rector stated that when man follows Adam and puts the blame on woman, and also attempts to call it the fault of God, as Adam did when he said, "The woman Thou gavest me," that the right-thinking person has only the same contempt for man as he has for Adam.

Concluding, Mr. Memminger paid a deep tribute to the way in which woman has kept the single standard of purity while man has been doing his best to break it down for hundreds of years, and named as the remedy for the entire state of affairs the necessity for religious life to a personal reality.

FLYING VERY FATAL TO U. S. ARMY BIRDMEN

Washington, May 25.—The United States has a larger percentage of accidental deaths among government aviators than any other nation, save Italy, according to statistics filed with the chief signal officer of the army and made public today.

In percentage of losses, England takes third place, France fourth. An examination of the records of the United States in comparison with those of England, the only other nation from which exact data are available, shows, however, that American aviators average nearly twice the number of hours available for long periods of training in aviation.

"The records of aviation in our service are causes for congratulation rather than commiseration," he says, adding:

"Unfortunately casualties are given much more prominent places in our publications than the praiseworthy achievements."

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM CRY OF ADVENTISTS

Washington, May 25.—A nation-wide campaign in opposition to the efforts of various religious bodies "to secure religious legislation and to subvert religious freedom" was authorized in resolutions adopted at today's conference of the Seventh Day Adventists of the World at Takoma Park, Md. The preamble to the resolution declares that "the present agitation to secure religious legislation and to subvert religious freedom demand the most earnest efforts to teach and maintain true principles of religious liberty."

At a special religious service tonight Evangelist R. C. Russell, of Chicago, declared that nearly all the signs given in the Bible relative to the second coming of Christ had been, or were being rapidly fulfilled, indicating the near approach of the event.

FRENCHMEN OBJECT TO MILITARY SERVICE

Paris, May 25.—Twenty thousand socialists, laborites and revolutionaries of various groups attended a meeting at Pre St. Gervais, outside the fortifications today in protest against three years army service.

Eighty orators, including M. Jaures, the socialist leader, harangued the assemblage from wagons. The meeting was orderly.

All That Glitters IS Gold, Solid Gold in This

Sale of Jewelry

At Nine O'Clock This Morning

Wherever the word gold is used in the descriptions below you may know that pure, unalloyed, solid gold is meant, nothing else. We would lay particular emphasis on this because the prices might be misleading. To halve the prices on gold jewelry is, we believe, to break a precedent, and, we readily admit, to tax one's credulity. The fact is, however, that the savings average more than one-half, although in several instances the new price is not exactly half the original.

Why such a sale? You may ask, arguing that gold jewelry is of fixed worth and value. All very true, but at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company's gold jewelry is also merchandise and as such must not overstay its time.

So the rings and the pins and the lockets and the chains and the necklaces that are wanted for graduation gifts are going to cost just half what you had expected.

The list below is not complete—it is representative, it shows the tenor of the sale, its opportunities and possibilities.

None of these articles will be shown or sold before 9 o'clock.

A BANKER SOUNDS WARNING.

One of the most incisive warnings to the farmers and business men of Georgia against the suicidal folly of the all-cotton fetich yet issued comes from Benjamin W. Hunt, former president of the Georgia State Bankers' association, and a recognized authority on finance and farm economics. Mr. Hunt is not an alarmist, a pessimist or a visionary. He is one of the most conservative, prosperous and far-seeing business men in Georgia. He simply sees beneath the surface of things, as he is in position to do, and points the dangers if Georgia continues to single-shot on cotton. Coming in close succession with several recent communications to The Constitution on this subject, Mr. Hunt's card is significant.

Mr. Hunt cites statistics from the department of agriculture to show that last year Georgia, next to Florida, produced a smaller volume of cotton to the acre than any other cotton-producing state—and since Florida grows mainly sea island cotton, even that comparison gives Georgia none of the advantage. California, upon which Georgia has never looked seriously as a cotton-producing state, grew 450 pounds to the acre, Georgia 159 pounds!

The writer indicates that this striking discrepancy is just one penalty of the one-crop system. He says, and as a banker he speaks with authority, that we are living on our capital and surplus as shown by the department's report on land values. We are stripping the acres of their fertility, robbing posterity is the way he puts it, by continuing year after year to grow cotton, which takes all the life from the soil, to the exclusion of everything else.

Mr. Hunt advises as one way out, and the most direct, the cattle industry. The cattle-tick, which once stood as a barrier, has practically been eliminated. Where it still exists he believes bankers should co-operate in its extermination. Then should come the breeding of cattle. So important does he regard this feature that he would have bankers loan money to responsible farmers to promote the revival of the industry. He argues that not only is cattle raising enormously profitable in itself, supplying food and shutting off a tremendous drain to the west, but it supplies a natural fertilizer with which to bring up wornout acres.

This sober-minded Georgia financier does not mince words in warning the bankers and farmers of the drift of the trouble they are courting by the single-crop system. His expert testimony more than corroborates the contentions of several recent Constitution correspondents. Is it not time for bankers, merchants, farmers to co-operate in retrieving the millions Georgia now loses each year; the greater millions she is surely destined to lose if the all-cotton folly continues?

MENDING THE CURRENCY.

The past week has been one of conferences between President Wilson and important congressmen of both parties, with currency legislation as the topic. Senator Kern, senate floor leader, and Senator Owen, of the senate banking committee, have exchanged views with the president, who has also talked with Chairman Glass, of the house banking committee. In the meantime, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has interviewed influential members of both house and senate on the needs of the nation in this direction.

Opinion in Washington differs as to whether currency legislation can be enacted best be postponed until the regular session next December. But the main thing is that continuous activity on part of the president and the house and senate leaders indicate that the long-continued agitation for action is approaching a crisis, and that the democratic party may soon be expected to relieve a condition that has for years been the cause of non-partisan complaint.

Secretaries of the treasury and unbiased economic experts have been telling us for the past twenty years or more that our present currency system is a constant menace. There is no doubt that the inflexibility of the system aggravated the penalties of the panic of 1907, and as it exists now it would embarrass and not facilitate any measures looking toward relief that might be taken in future emergencies. No other nation of importance in the world maintains as slack and unscientific a system as does the United States. We are put at a disadvantage not only at home, but also abroad.

WHO PAYS FOR PORK?

Who pays for the millions of dollars' worth of political "pork" that congress distributes annually to each of its members? If the people who elect congress could answer that question intelligently there would be less pork. For it is the careless ignorance of the average American as to the way his public money goes that makes the pork-barrel system possible. If individuals were as indifferent in tracing their personal as their public expenditures, the financial record of each year would present a serial story of bankruptcies.

It is the American people that pay for pork. The money thus expended is taken from them in indirect taxes that include tariff taxes and the tax on tobacco and whisky. Pretty soon the income tax and those who pay it will be added to the list that are ministering to the fetich of political pork. The $190,000 postoffice at Bunkville with its population of 1,500; the custom-house at Gull Harbor costing $50,000, while the imports each year might be measured in hundreds; the millions squandered annually on unnavigable creeks and rivers and harbors; the other millions lavished to build and maintain dock-yards in inaccessible places, and military posts in the wilderness. All these specimens of political pork are paid for by the nation. The man in Georgia seldom stops to think of it in that light, but it is his good money that is being sunk in these projects. And that money would come in mighty handy on improvements nearer home. If he were personally solicited to contribute $5 toward a postoffice in Squeedunk when Squeedunk didn't need and wasn't entitled to one, he would put up a lusty yell. But congress takes his $5, just the same, in sugar-coated form, some particular congressman is made sure of his job the next time, and all are happy.

Aside from its features of graft and grab, the chief objection to the pork-barrel is its intrinsic injustice. It is standing in the way of more honest and imperative improvements. One ray of light is that the income tax, which takes money directly and not indirectly, from the citizen may create a healthy curiosity as to the way in which congress spends that money. Once an era of that sort is ushered in we are going to see the end of the pork-barrel.

A NEW TUBERCULOSIS CURE.

Dr. Carl Von Ruck, of Asheville, N. C., may not have discovered the serum that will eventually cure tuberculosis, but his methods inspire much more confidence than those of Dr. F. F. Friedmann. Several weeks ago it was represented to Secretary of the Navy Daniels that Dr. Von Ruck had been experiencing remarkable results with a serum with which he had for some time been experimenting. Secretary Daniels commissioned Dr. E. R. Stitt, of the naval medical school, to visit Dr. Von Ruck's sanitarium and thoroughly investigate his treatment.

Dr. Stitt has just made public the results of his investigation and they are at least worthy of attention. The only difficulty is that any serum treatment for the next year or two must suffer public distrust by reason of Friedmann's strange performances. But the Von Ruck treatment has inspired enthusiasm in the government physician, who says that while it is impossible at this time to speak dogmatically, the prospect is hopeful. Dr. Von Ruck, it appears, has been having uniformly good effects from his serum. He is making no loud claims and modestly says that he has much yet to learn. It will be remembered that when the public health service asked Dr. Friedmann for a supplementary portion of his vaccine for further tests, he absolutely evaded the requests. Dr. Von Ruck has, on the other hand, supplied the government with all the serum it asked and stands ready to furnish more.

All reputable doctors are agreed that no definite verdict can be handed down on any vaccine or serum treatment of tuberculosis now before the public. With long-suffering tolerance they are even suspending judgment on Friedmann's cure, whatever they may think privately. All, too, are agreed that the conventional, proved open air, diet and rest treatment should not for a moment be abandoned until the new remedies offered establish their right to take its place. The methods now in use are to be thanked for materially reducing the death rate from tuberculosis. The propaganda that has become nation-wide has also undoubtedly been of great benefit in the field of prevention. Tuberculosis may ultimately be conquered by means that are purely medical. But until such means are proved beyond the shadow of a doubt the patient and his friends and the public will do well to rely upon the system that stands already self-recommended to the world of science.

JUST from GEORGIA

"Dixie" Far From Home.

I.

'Way up in the Northland, under skies of gray,
Heard the band a-playin' "Dixie," and they all cried "Hooray!"
I seemed to hear the kildees—saw the larks fly o'er the loam,
And the heart in me was singin' the songs of love and home.

II.

Old times in Georgia—they came back again—
Meadows of the Maytime—roses in the rain;
O'er the dreary distance far I seemed to roam,
I heard in dreamy twilights the songs of love and home.

III.

'Way up in the Northland, but "Dixie" sent a thrill,
And one said, as it echoed: "We're friends and brothers still!"
And my heart went back to Georgia as the bee flies to the comb,
And all the world was singin' the songs of love and home.

Return of the Prodigals.

They all lost out in Washington—no plums were on the bough;
The office-seekers are comin' home, an' we'll put 'em to the plow;
We'll make 'em earn their livin'—follow the furrows fine;
They'll help build up the country when they're in the plowin' line.

A Billville Critic.

Our old friend, Dr. James W. Lee, was in our midst the other day. We were mighty glad to see him, for we had just read his latest book, "The Religion of Science," in which we learned, for the first time, that science has religion, too. We advise all our subscribers to read this book, for when the scientists get religion the whole world should shout "Hallelujia!"

But the light of God shines in Love's eyes,
And Love is a dream that never dies.

The Afflicted One.

Suffering from the almost-fatal spring fever the poet of The Cedartown Standard sings:

"Only wish the rent would stop
Till the big blackberry crop
Comes along so sweet and thick
(Only we're too tired to pick!)
Yes, we're feeling mighty bum;
Makes no difference, go or come;
All we want to do is jest
To sit around and rest—and rest.
Our spring fever's past all aid—
Hundred and twenty in the shade!
To tell this truth we are averse:
Our fever's daily getting worse."

The Lucky Season.

Even in Maryland the watermelon season has its influence. The Bentztown Bard sings:

"I've heard from the watermelons,
And the cantaloupes and the pears;
And I tell you the world's all hunky,
And it's not all trouble and cares.
There're going to be some few cherries,
And apples and peaches, too.
And, Lord, but the sweet strawberries
Are smilin' so in the dew."

We mistake his knock for that of Trouble,

By the Wayside.

Singin' on the way
In the beauty of the day—
Thank the Lord we're livin' in the meadows of the May.

New News of Yesterday

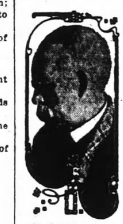
General Spinner's Account of the Back Pay Agitation.

By E. J. Edwards.

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

The late David B. Hill was elected in 1891 United States senator by the New York state legislature. At that time Mr. Hill was governor of New York. His term as United States senator began on March 4, succeeding his election. He, however, retained the office of governor during the entire year, only leaving it a few hours prior to the inauguration of his successor, the late Roswell Pettibone Flower.

There was then nine months when Governor Hill was entitled to receive salary as United States senator, while, at the same time, he was receiving salary as governor of New York. Some criticism was publicly expressed and a good deal circulated in private, for it was feared that Governor Hill contemplated accepting both salaries, there being nothing in the law to prevent his doing that.



E. J. Edwards.

He silenced all criticism, however, when he took his seat in the United States senate by instructing the secretary of the senate, or whoever the proper authority was, to return to the United States treasury department all of the salary which had accumulated between March 4 and the first of January following, which amounted approximately to $4,000.

At that time it was the opinion of some lawyers that although Mr. Hill had covered this money in the treasury, yet either he or his heirs could draw it out if so disposed, for it still stood as a credit to him.

While this discussion was in progress, I asked the late Noah Davis, who was for many years chief justice of one branch of the supreme court of New York state, what his opinion was respecting the ability of Mr. Hill or his heirs to withdraw that money from the treasury.

Instead of answering me directly, Judge Davis narrated to me an anecdote which he said was told to him by General Francis Spinner, who was treasurer of the United States for nearly fifteen years, beginning with President Lincoln's administration.

"General Spinner told me," said Judge Davis, "that while he was treasurer of the United States there were innumerable attempts to get money out of the treasury, but only one voluntarily to get money into it. He said, 'Judge, you remember what a row was stirred up because congress, about 1871, adopted a resolution by which the pay of members of congress was increased from $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

"'In addition to this increase the resolution made the increase retroactive. Therefore, congress not only got the increase of $5,000, but the increase dated back to the beginning of that congress. That gave to each member about $2,000.

"'Well, a great cry went up through the country. Congressmen were called salary grabbers and backpay robbers. A good many of the members of congress got frightened; they were afraid these charges would cause their defeat for re-election. They did not know at first what to do. At last somebody suggested that this back pay be returned to the treasury department.

"'I remember that Senator John Sherman was especially worked up about this. He came to see me, and I told him that he could turn into the treasury department the back pay, about $3,000.

"'I looked up the law and I told him that there was nothing to prevent his turning the money in, but it would be his money just the same, and the treasury department would be no more than its custodian.

"'He asked me if at any time he could draw it out or if his heirs could. I told him it could unquestionably be done. The treasury department would have to honor his draft for the three thousand dollars. He told me that he should return the money, and he was certain that neither he nor any of his heirs would ever ask for it.

"'Well, members of congress made my life miserable, for many of them came to see me about the matter and I could not tell them anything different from what I had told John Sherman.

"'A good many of them did return their back pay into the treasury department, and it was there when I resigned. Unless congress finds some way to cover it absolutely and permanently in the treasury department, there his back pay will stay until doomsday or as long as the treasury department lasts, unless by and by, when the storm blows over, congressmen venture to draw it out.'

"I never knew," continued Judge Davis, "whether legislation was obtained or any ruling by which this back pay or by which the salary which Governor Hill returned to the treasury department passed absolutely into the treasury department."

The World's Mysteries

MYSTERIES of EUROPEAN POLITICS

WHO WAS RICHARD PLANTAGENET?

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

On December 21, 1550, there died in England a poor working man, whose name was Richard Plantagenet, about whom there was much mystery. He was believed to be a son of Richard III, king of England. There seems to be very much more evidence to substantiate his identity than in the cases of most pretenders.

No less an authority than Dr. Thomas Brett, who saw the entry of the man's death in the parish register of Eastwell, tells the following story, many of the particulars of which he obtained from the Earl of Winchelsea at Eastwell house:

"Sir Thomas Moyle having, about 1545, purchased the estate of Eastwell, began to build the Eastwell house. He was surprised to observe that one of the bricklayers, a man well advanced in years, was accustomed, on leaving off work, to take out a book and begin to read. Sir Thomas' curiosity was excited to know what book occupied the man's attention, but the extreme shyness of the student for some time baffled his desires. At length, taking him by surprise, he found, to his increased astonishment, that the man perused a Latin book. He then inquired how he came to be able to read a book in that language, and after some conversation, obtained from him a series of particulars which he said had hitherto been told to none.

"He was, in his earliest years, boarding with a schoolmaster and there was occasionally visited by a gentleman who paid regularly for his maintenance and education, but he did not let him know his parentage. At length, when he was about 16, this gentleman took him on a journey, and introduced him to a stately house, where another person of distinguished appearance and wearing a star and the Order of the Garter, came to see him, conversed kindly with him, and then dismissed him.

"Some time after he was conducted into Leicestershire and brought before the king in his tent, in the midst of an army, and was surprised to find that the king was the same distinguished person whom he had lately seen. Richard embraced him, acknowledged him as his son and said that if he should, as he hoped, survive the battle about to be fought the son should be duly provided for. The boy was told to take a position at some distance till the end of the conflict. The king also warned him, in the event of his defeat and death, to conceal the relationship now acknowledged, as it would be sure to be fatal to him."

This is the story told by Richard Plantagenet. He did as the king desired and when he saw that the battle was going against the royal troops he made his way from the field. As he was entering the town of Leicester he saw a dead man brought in naked, lying across a horse, whom he recognised as the monarch with whom he had spoken the previous day.

Plantagenet was entirely unfamiliar with the world generally, and recognizing that it was best to follow the king's advice, particularly as he had no proof to offer if he told his story, and being out of money, he engaged himself to a bricklayer and he spent the remainder of his life in contented obscurity.

When Sir Thomas Moyle heard the remarkable story of the old man he built a small house for him on his grounds and requested that he should take what food he required henceforth from his kitchen. The old bricklayer only lived between three and four years to enjoy the ease at last accorded him.

This story is of such a romantic character that it might well be doubted. Mr. Jesse, however, in his "Memoirs of King Richard III" expresses a general faith in it, and shows several reasons for thinking it true, most striking of which is that formerly when any person of noble family was interred at Eastwell, it was the custom to affix a special mark against the name of the deceased in the register of burials, and this satisfactory symbol is prefixed to the name of Richard Plantagenet.

Was this humble bricklayer the son of Richard III?

GEORGIA BANKER SOUNDS WARNING AGAINST ALL-COTTON FETICH

(Benjamin W. Hunt, of Eatonton, is former president of the Georgia State Bankers' association. He is a recognized authority on finance and farm economics.)

Editor Constitution: The report of the department of agriculture exhibits the following yields of cotton per acre by the different cotton states in 1912:

States.	Yield Per Acre Acres	Lbs. Cotton.
California	9,000	450
North Carolina	1,543,000	267
Missouri	103,000	260
Virginia	47,000	250
South Carolina	2,486,000	209
Texas	11,338,000	206
Louisiana	920,000	193
Arkansas	1,991,000	190
Oklahoma	2,983,000	183
Mississippi	2,880,000	173
Alabama	3,730,000	172
Tennessee	783,000	160
Georgia	5,335,000	159
Florida	224,000	113

Lowest in yield per acre of all the states that cultivate upland cotton stands the record of Georgia.

Florida, it is true, made less cotton per acre, but the cotton of Florida is largely long staple, which yields less, and the best energies of that state are devoted to the cultivation of the citrus fruits and to market gardening.

It is our duty to scan the records with the utmost care and analysis that we may correct the faults of the past. No citizen of Georgia can feel other than a sense of shame at such an exhibit, as the summing up of last year's experience in cotton raising shows.

Those Georgia cotton planters who exercised the best judgment in their farm management, made much more than the average recorded of 159 pounds per acre, hence there must have been millions of acres that made less than the pitiful 159 pounds, or the department of agriculture dividing the total yield by the acres picked would not have struck the 159-pound average. That the average yield in 1912 sold at the average price produced a net income below the American standard of living. I believe every political economist will grant.

The hope of this country lies, not in pauperizing the farmer to a level of the unfortunate Asiatic peasant, but in elevating the standard of living of the American of whatsoever section.

I would not call attention to this shameful condition, resulting from all cotton culture in Georgia, if I did not believe that the only way to reform is to first acknowledge our sins and then repent, and when converted to stand firmly for better things.

Native Georgians are of old colonial stock, and must not be pauperized to a bare peasant's subsistence.

A comparison of the acres planted, and the census of the different states' income from other industries than cotton, shows those states excelling in raising the most cotton per acre are states that practice more diversification than do we.

Hence, diversification increases the yield and net income of the farmer. If cotton were an all sufficient income producing crop, Georgia should rank as leader instead of lowest of all in the production per acre. The statisticians tell us that no people following agriculture ever yet succeeded financially who depended on raising but one single variety of farm produce for sale.

Cattle Culture.

Realising the truth of history, the easiest step toward diversification is to include animal husbandry with cotton raising.

The pessimists even then may remind the advocate of diversification that the live stock enthusiasts have not made good in the past. Doubters are seldom entirely fair in their deductions, which are generally made from observations that do not include all the factors.

Heretofore cattle raising and the dairy industry has been handicapped with a curse that no combination of other favorable conditions could supplant. I refer to the pestiferous, vampire fever-carrying cattle tick.

That any farmers have heretofore succeeded in cattle raising is to me the miracle, not that the many have failed.

The successful extermination of the cattle ticks has revolutionized the conditions. Any one who will, may, after the extermination of this pest, follow a profitable diversification of farm crops.

Possibilities not to be named in a short article are open and inviting that were closed heretofore.

With animal manure in abundance almost any desired crop may be raised on our lands, for the table, for the cattle or for market.

The farmers of Georgia may produce 500 pounds of cotton per acre, as dairy farmers are now doing, and this is as practicable as the 159 pounds per acre which now carries the additional cost of $1.33 worth of guano.

The additional 341 pounds of cotton does not state all the financial benefit, for the beef or dairy cattle are in themselves a source of net income as well as the foundation for a truly profitable yield of cotton per acre. The most reprehensible of facts follows from a study of the government report—that is, that we Georgians are robbing future generations of a means of agricultural support, as we impoverish the land with an all-cotton system. Our capital surplus and undivided profits, represented in land, are diminishing yearly, as this report exhibits.

The Prescription.

That we may realize Georgia's condition having reached the degradation of ranking the poorest of all the states in cotton production per acre and profit by an earnest endeavor to correct the method that has caused the facts to appear tabulated in print is my reason for this communication. To diagnosticate our condition is but the first step to prescribe a medicine that will cure before the disease becomes chronic, is the second; and to see that the cure is applied, is all that the most skilled may be called upon to do, in medicine or in morals. If the panacea for the penury accompanying a yield of 159 pounds of cotton per acre is diversification, then, fellow-bankers, no other physician is as well prepared as are we to prescribe for the disease and furnish the medicine.

Indeed, where tick eradication is opposed by ignorance, a campaign of education has to proceed even the palliation of assistance on the part of the banker.

The field of finance we have chosen for our avocation, having elected it as our calling, our duty is to guide the people away from the penury toward which they are headed, and where possible assist them toward financial independence through a better system of agriculture.

After tick extermination in a country, the way is open for banks to loan money to deserving farmers to buy cattle at our minimum rate of interest. If the more conservative of our directors object to such loans, then many of us, impelled by a desire to serve our citizens, may assist the farmers out of our individual funds.

After tick eradication has removed the ever-constant loss to live stock, cattle appreciate and become a safe, sure collateral asset.

There are other roads to agricultural prosperity. I point out the one I have helped to turnpike that progress may be made easier to those who feel the humiliation of the lesson to be drawn from the recent bulletin by the United States department of agriculture. BENJAMIN W. HUNT.

The Little City Feller.

(From The National Magazine.)

The little city feller was as pale as he could be—
My mother had him sent out for a week, so he could see
The really, truly country, an' get lots of milk an' eggs,
An' put some fat, ma said, on his pore little arms an' legs;
An' then she told me he ain't got no good home like I got,
An' never knew his father an' his mother, like as not.

HOW DANGER LURKS IN GERMAN MEASLES

It Often Serves as Deadly Disguise for Real Measles and Scarlet Fever.

If an innocent-looking and apparently harmless little ailment comes tapping at your door this spring, and says, "I am German Measles," don't you take anybody's word for it except that of your physician.

Of course nobody wants to have German measles if he can help it, and when the disease breaks out in the community, the state board of health urges that all the regular precautions against the epidemic be taken, but the principal danger lies in the fact that true measles or scarlet faver may be mistaken for it.

It is Highly Contagious.

While not a dangerous disease as compared with the two latter mentioned, German measles is highly contagious and persons attacked with it suffer from many of the unpleasant symptoms that accompany true measles. Single cases are seldom seen. The disease usually makes its appearance in epidemic form. The winter and spring months are the usual times. German measles can be communicated during the entire course of the disease, but is most contagious during the earlier stages. The only persons immune are infants, under six months, and persons who have already had it. The fact that you may have had measles before gives you no immunity.

The first thing to do in a case of German measles is to make sure that it is really German measles. A simple method of diagnosis, after the rash appears, is to see if the glands at the back of the neck are enlarged. If they are, it is probably German measles. But this mode of diagnosis is not always sure, and the only safe plan is to have a doctor.

The diagnosis once established, there is very little danger. It usually runs a mild course, and if the patient receives the proper attention during the attack, there will not likely be any complications or after effects.

The treatment is simple. The patient should be isolated to prevent the spread of the disease; should be put to bed and kept on a liquid diet. The physician will sometimes prescribe drugs, or no medicine at all may be needed.

Course of the Disease.

After one has been exposed to the disease, it usually takes ten to twenty days for it to develop. The appearance of the rash is usually the only first symptom, though it may be accompanied by catarrhal symptoms and a general "sick" feeling. Fever, if present at all, is usually slight. The lymphatic glands at the back of the neck are nearly always swollen.

The rash usually appears first on the face and then spreads; but in exceptional cases it may appear first on any part of te body. Sometimes it appears as small pimples, sometimes as large pimples, and sometimes in large irregular reddish splotches. The eruption usually lasts three days, but sometimes runs to six.

In stating that German measles is a mild disease, two things must be borne in mind; first, that it is highly contagious, and that just as much care should be taken in its isolation as in any other epidemic disease, and, second, that like many other intrinsically mild diseases, it can easily enough result in serious complications, if not treated with reasonable care.

In cases where the epidemic breaks out in a community the usual precautions should be taken. Isolation and the sterilizing by burning, boiling or fumigation of everything that comes in contact with the patient are the principal precautions.

EQUAL FAVOR SHOWN SOUTHERN COMPANIES

Secretary Bickerstaff Assured Fire Underwriters Not Discriminated Against.

The big eastern financial institutions which loan large sums of money for building and other purposes have issued a formal statement assuring the public that the southern fire insurance companies will not be discriminated against. This assurance has been received by Charles A. Bickerstaff, secretary and treasurer of the association of southern fire companies, in Atlanta. Life insurance companies and some financial organizations which make large building loans customarily have the right to specify where the fire insurance on the building shall be placed.

After writing to some three score of the big life insurance companies, Mr. Bickerstaff has received the assurance that southern fire insurance companies are to be considered on exactly the same basis as the eastern ones. The only qualification required of a company is that it shall be a joint stock company, solvent and in a prosperous condition. Writing to Mr. Bickerstaff, the heads of the big life insurance companies said: "We wish you to place us on record in the most unqualified manner as being willing to accept the policies of your companies composing the association."

This means, of course, that southern fire insurance companies have won exactly the same high standing in the financial world as the old eastern companies. It means that when a million dollar skyscraper is put up in Atlanta, or any other southern city, the fire insurance can be carried with a southern company, no matter how much of the money to build the structure has been borrowed from the north.

The association of southern fire companies was organized in 1910 by a number of the leading companies of this section, its object being to promote and encourage wise building and tax laws and the reduction of fire waste and other matters of vital interest. It was influential in securing the enactment of the new Georgia insurance law, which is conceded to be the best that has been put on the statute books of any state in many years.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD BY TYPO UNION

Special Sermon Delivered by Rev. J. Wade Conkling at Church of Our Father.

Memorial services in honor of dead members of the Atlanta Typographical union, No. 48, were held Sunday morning and afternoon by the local members.

At 11 o'clock the members gathered at the Church of Our Father, on West Baker street, where a special sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. Wade Conkling, was delivered. Two beautiful floral tributes of this morning were a horn solo by Juulis R. Watts, and a vocal solo by Miss Ruby Duvall.

In the afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the services in honor of the dead continued at Oakland cemetery, where many are sleeping.

Dr. Jere A. Moore, pastor of the Harris Street Presbyterian church, delivered a special address on memorials, bringing out the value of memorials in every-day life. The roll-call of the dead was read by J. W. Armistead, president Atlanta Typo union, followed by an oration.

Owing to the fact that the flowers for decoration of the graves arrived late, members of the Women's Auxiliary remained afterward to strew them on each printer's grave.

"PLAY BALL" WAS TOPIC OF DR. RIDLEY'S SERMON

Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church, spoke to a packed house last night on "Play Ball," drawing illustration after illustration from the great American game. He showed himself familiar with the sport, and frequently referred to noted players now in the game. Some of the lessons drawn from the game were: (1) It takes a man to play ball; a man of courage, a man quick to think, a man of endurance; (2) Every man must look after his own business in baseball; (3) The dream of every runner is to at last safely cross the home plate.

"CRYSTAL PALACE" WILL OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

The new and beautifully appointed barber shop of A. F. Herndon's, at 66 Peachtree street, will be open for public inspection at 3 o'clock this afternoon. There will be music by an orchestra, and flowers and souvenirs for all who call. An especial invitation is extended to the ladies. The new place will be known as The Crystal Palace, and is said to be one of the most perfect shops of this kind in America. The public is invited from 3 p. m. till 10 p. m. Between these hours no business will be transacted.

WARMER ON SUNDAY THAN WAS EXPECTED

Sunday proved even warmer than was expected from the weather reports. Indications are that the clear weather of Saturday and Sunday will last today, and that the temperature will continue to rise slowly.

Hundreds took advantage of the warm Sunday afternoon to enjoy a swim in Piedmont park lake, and thousands watched the swimmers from the seats and terraces around the lake. The water was rather cool for a day in the latter part of May, but no one seemed to mind that feature of it.

CHRIST FOR ALL DECLARES DR. LEE

Noted Methodist Divine in Wesleyan Commencement Sermon Says Jesus Is Reorganizer of Society.

Macon, Ga., May 25.—(Special.)—Dr. James W. Lee, pastor of St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, south, of St. Louis, Mo., delivered today before a large audience the commencement sermon for Wesleyan college.

Taking as his subject, "Inspired Millionaires," he took an optimistic view of American life by stressing the numbers of wealthy men who have become imbued with the Christian spirit and used their money to aid their fellow men. Dr. Lee, who is well known throughout Georgia, received a warm reception from many friends in Macon on the occasion of his arrival here for the address Sunday morning.

His text was from I. Corinthians, III., 21-23: "All things are yours, whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas or the world or life or death, or things present or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christ's and Christ is God's."

In part Dr. Lee said:

"Every man who puts enough of the spirit of good will into his life work to make it available for the use of mankind is inspired. No man can really be said to own what he creates with his hands or with his head, unless for his fellowman into it. No man owns in any real sense what he thinks or what he wills or what he achieves by the exercise of all his powers of intelligence, volition and affection, until the output of his life is lifted high enough up to be the law of existentness to become the property of all men as completely as it is that of himself.

No Man Owns Millions.

"The right of mere fee simple title to houses, to lands, to money, that secures to the individual the exclusive use of property, makes it his very much after the same fashion that a squirrel makes so many hickory nuts he has managed to gather and pack into a hole in a tree out of the reach of other squirrels.

"If human beings were only animals, and like them, lived under the law of exclusiveness, then we might say, when a man packed away a million in his drawer for his own use entirely, that it was his. It would be his in so far as he could convert it into hams and flour and coats and shoes and cravats and houses and use it for food and raiment and shelter. But there is very little of a man you can feed on ham, or wrap in a coat or shelter in a house. Man is essentially spirit and not animal: he is soul and not body; he is external and not temporal; he is permanent and not passing; he is the child of the Unseen and not of the seen.

Strife for Individual Rights.

"The civilized world is torn today just as it has been in all ages, by the independent, self-assertive champions of individual rights, who would have their own way at the expense of society and by combinations, political and commercial, who would have their own way at the expense of individuals. There is no peace for the champions of individual rights nor for the champions of organized commercial and social rights, until there be vouchsafed to both the contending parties the insight to recognize that in the constitution of humanity furnished by the master of men, the Son of Man, and the Son of God is given the only order in which all the people can get together and organize themselves in such a way as that they can live without friction and move on to the realization of the high destiny for which they were created and ordained.

"You see the conditions upon which all things, Paul, Apollos, Cephas, the present, the future, life and death, become yours are clearly set forth by Paul. You must come into living relation and partnership to that vast body of which Christ is the head and the heart and the life. It is only as Christ gets into humanity that it is lifted above the level of the earth, that it is quickened, renewed, refined, sublimated and universalized. Humanity without Christ is an amorphous, purposeless, inert aggregation of self-centered units. When Christ enters humanity a new single center takes the place of millions and millions of small self-centers. When Christ comes in the finite, human centers, instead of whirling about the passing and perishing little selves of the breathing human aggregation, find a new standard of activity. Instead of every one circulating about the interests of self, each begins to perform functions which look to the wellbeing of all. It is necessary in our day, as never before, to call attention to the sketch given by St. Paul in Ephesians, in accordance with which human beings must regulate their lives in order to grow and in order to be permanent. When we recognize, as St. Paul does in us, that it takes all men to make one man, and that no single individual can be himself only as he comes into terms with all the members in the body to which he belongs, we are ready to recognize how important it is that this great truth be emphasized today.

Came to Save All.

"We have been accustomed to preach that Christ came into the world to save the individual soul, but it is far truer to say that Christ came into the world to secure social integration. He came into the world to make human solidarity on the highest moral and spiritual level a possibility. We do not think a little, we are obliged to see that this is true. The individual is made by society, and when society disintegrates, the individual degenerates. So the work of the ministry, according to St. Paul, is to edify the body of Christ, to gather by means of the gospel and the power of the Holy Spirit the individual, self-centered human elements into one organized whole.

"Christian doctrines contain a prescription for social ills and diseases, and not only a prescription for individual woes. In pointing so clearly to the path that leads to the salvation of society, Christianity points to the path that leads to the salvation of the individual composing it. We must bear in mind that the existence of the individual is conditioned by that of society, that outside of society the individual cannot be. In order, therefore, that the individual may be saved, it is necessary to save society. When the stability of society is guaranteed, the security of the individuals are safeguarded. The welfare of society and consequently the welfare of the individual demand that the individual shall conduct himself in accordance with immutable rules which look to the preservation of the organized social whole. The survival of the individual and his welfare are thus conditioned by the survival and welfare of society. When society goes down, the individuals go down. A doctrine which conduces solely to individual aspiration and to the relief of individual distress is a doctrine condemned to short-lived existence. It is only when we are in a position to appreciate the contribution of Christianity to society that we can understand the extraordinary persistence of Christian belief and of those Christian institutions which have survived the changes produced by twenty centuries of history.

A Reorganized Humanity.

"In these troubled and uncertain times, when storm clouds are gathering on the horizon, when the peals of distant thunder can be distinctly heard, when the sultry and tempest-foreboding atmosphere is heavily charged with electricity, it becomes us to look to that everlasting word of God spoken for the growth and integration of society throughout all the years. The only way in which society can be saved from destruction amid the many perils and menaces is by reorganizing itself again inside themoral and spiritual order of which Jesus Christ is the head and the law. When we look around us today, we see anarchy threatening everywhere; we see disorganization and incoherence everywhere triumphant, egotism everywhere gaining ground and observing the fundamental notion of social solidarity that is only possible when established through the body of Christ. There is anarchy in the economic sphere, anarchy in the family life, anarchy in morals, anarchy in politics, everywhere the same absence of authority, the same absence of commanding ideals and integrating principles; everywhere the individual pursuing his own ends, regardless of higher interests; everywhere individual rights asserting themselves at the expense of the interests of society.

Anarchy Threatened.

"Anarchy is the malady which is today threatening society. What we need to recognize again is the necessity of yielding to authority. Christianity furnishes a basis for authority, as the indispensable prerequisite for the salvation for society. In Christianity authority is represented as having its source in God, and God has delegated His supreme authority to His church, which is the body of Christ. We have been looking for authority in the church as an ecclesiastical organization, or in the Bible as the revelation of God's mind, but absolute authority resides in the Lord Jesus Christ who created the Bible and who created the church. The importance of yielding to authority was never so great as it is today because humanity has come into larger and completer relationships than were ever known before.

Christ Within Man.

"The Christ of the churches has been mainly conceived as a Christ outside of men. It has been the custom to represent Christianity as dropped from the sky, unrelated to history and without a place in the evolution and thought of life. Paul discovered a person outside of himself, whom he called the Savior, and that person was Christ, but Paul had also grown to learn that the way in which the external Savior really saved was by waking to consciousness the Christ within himself; that is, his own deeper self, which in every man is the Christ, the anointed of God. The ministry which carries to men the good news of a Christ in history, must also insist upon the truth that Christ is in all men and that that is the hope of glory for them. Here is the very message We need. Christ for all men and Christ in all men. The former could not be without the latter. Nothing could be for men which is not in them.

Prize Beauty of the Golden West

Native daughters in every state of the union who lay claim to beauty will be interested in "California's prettiest girl." She is Miss Emma De Velasco, of San Francisco. She won that enviable title when she was selected in a $100 beauty contest conducted by the Portola festival committee.

She will be the poster girl for the festival which will be held in San Francisco in October next to celebrate the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific coast by Vasco Nunes de Balboa. Born in Los Angeles March 22, 1888, and educated there and at the Santa Monica High school, Miss De Velasco has lived in San Francisco since 1905. She is a musician of ability and has sung at many private concerts. She is a business girl, too, being private secretary to one of the most important lumber dealers of the Pacific coast.

Beauty is not for anyone who has not the sense of beauty; righteousness is not for anyone who does not belong to a righteous order; there can be no manifestation of love except to a loving heart. This means that no Christ appearing in the world could be anything for it unless He were already in it. The highest function of the historical Christ is to bring the potential Christ, which is in every man, which is every man's deeper self, to self-recognition. It is unto His own that Christ always comes. This is the great work of salvation. The majority of men are living in self-ignorance and therefore in ignorance of God. The Christ in you and the Christ in other men and the Christ in the heaven are but different manifestations of one and the same universal, divine life. It is only when a man realizes this that he emerges from a state of selfishness, the state in which his own individual self is the center of everything, to that state of love whose center is everywhere. The discovery and surrender to the hidden Christ in himself is man's new birth. No man grows up into it. Ye must be born again." The necessity for a new birth does not rest upon any inherent corruption in human nature. The new birth is the birth of a new consciousness. It is the emerging of the deeper self into consciousness, a new discovery of what our nature really is in its depth, and through that new discovery, finding for itself a new center of life."

DR. STARNES SCORES IN OWN COMPOSITION

The Atlanta Music Festival association celebrated the centenary of the birth of Richard Wagner by a Wagnerian grand organ recital by Dr. Percy J. Starnes, at the Auditorium, Sunday afternoon. An audience of several hundred people applauded Wagner's overture to "Rienzi" and "The Evening Star" aria and grand march from Tannhauser. Dr. Starnes scored a decided hit with the Wolf-Ferrari intermezzo from "The Jewels of the Madonna," which he played for the first time, and he aroused the enthusiasm of an appreciative audience when he played his own composition, "The Grand Choeur Triomphale."

The grand choeur (grand chorus) is a general term which French organ writers use to display the power of the instrument. It usually consists of the main theme, together with a soft trio in the middle section, after a repetition of the first theme, and the selection finishes with a brilliant coda.

The feature of the concert was the descriptive program which gave the historic setting of each of the overtures and a criticism of the technique and subject matter of each.

The Auditorium was beautifully decorated for the recital, with the German colors blended with American flags. Suspended in mid air on the stage was a float of red, white and blue, draped under the kaiser's ensign, and the beams of the Auditorium ceiling were decorated with American colors.

POSTAL CLERKS' HEAD DEFENDS 8-HOUR LAW

Jacob Ungar Answers Attack on Eight-Hour Law and Says It Is All Right.

Jacob Ungar, president of Atlanta branch, No. 43, United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, makes an interesting statement in reference to the attitude of Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart, who holds that a large part of the delays in the handling of mail is incident to the operation of the eight-hour law.

This statement from the second assistant postmaster general has been generally published from Washington.

President Ungar says, in part:

"The news article appearing in The Constitution for May 23nd, entitled 'Eight-hour Law Blamed for Postal Delays; Measure Partly Responsible for Congestion,' may be misunderstood as being a statement from the postoffice department. Every reference, wherein the eight-hour law is blamed for alleged poor postal service, is erroneous and misleading, and appears to be the hasty composition of one who knows nothing of this law, its effect on, or its application to, the postal service.

"Note the wording of this law, as enacted by congress after extensive consideration:

"That on and after March 4, 1913, following the passage of the act, letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices shall be required to work not more than eight hours a day: Provided, that the eight hours of service shall not extend over a longer period than ten consecutive hours, and the schedule of duty of the employees shall be regulated accordingly.

"Sec. 2. That in cases of emergency, or if the needs of the service require, letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices may be required to work in excess of eight hours a day, and for such additional services they shall be paid extra in proportion to their salaries as fixed by law.

"Sec. 3. That should the needs of the service require the employment on Sunday of letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices, the employees who are required and ordered to perform Sunday work shall be allowed compensatory time on one of the six working days following the Sunday on which they perform such work.

"Sec. 4. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed."

"The construction of this law is very simple, and it can be applied but one way. It means eight hours of work a day, extra pay for overtime, and time off on a week day for Sunday work.

"An eight-hour day is nothing new in Atlanta and other large offices through the country. The clerks who handle the mails in this office have been working on an eight hour a day basis for some time previous to the passage of this act. On the first of the month, and at other times when the volume of mail was large, the clerks worked overtime and were given time off on 'light' days for this extra service. Those clerks who were required to work on Sunday were allowed compensatory time on a week day for such Sunday work.

"With a practical arrangement of schedules it is possible to handle the mails in an expeditious manner without requiring a clerk to work over eight hours. Where the exigencies of the service require it, the law does not prohibit a clerk working more than eight hours, but stipulates that he shall be paid for such overtime at the rate of his salary.

"Overtime work is unnecessary, if the work is properly scheduled, during more than two or three days a month, and then for only about two hours each day. This law was passed for the purpose of fixing the eight hours as a period of time, where, heretofore in some instances, a clerk had a tour of duty extending over twelve hours. Congress considered it to the best interest of the efficiency of the clerk to limit the day's work of eight hours within ten, and framed the law accordingly. It is reasonable and just, and a postoffice clerk should certainly not be required to work longer hours than does any artisan. The work of the postoffice clerk is arduous; he is the hardest worked, most faithful, but least appreciated, public servant. He is required to be a person of high mentality, proven by a civil service test before entering the service.

"It cannot be possible that the honorable second assistant postmaster general interprets the eight-hour law in the language of your correspondent to-wit: 'Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart, who has charge of the transportation service of the department, regarded as one of the most efficient men of the service, blames a large part of the delays on the operation of the eight-hour law in the form it is now, but he favored overtime pay for the employees. His reason for this is that the postoffice officials have no recourse from the operations of this law under any circumstances—the willingness of the employees themselves to help out in a pinch makes no difference. If there comes an unexpected flood of mail matter into one of the postoffices, as there frequently does, its delivery must wait upon the observance of this restrictive regulation of the service. On the other hand, if the employees willing work extra hours, and are allowed when necessary, were permitted to do so, recalving extra compensation therefor, much of the delay and congestion now experienced could have been avoided.'

"These statements are not a true interpretation of the eight-hour law, and to lead the public to believe, as in your article in question, that the eight-hour law is responsible for any irregularities in the postal service, is an imposition on the postoffice clerk. We can, and when necessary are willing to work overtime, but these instances are infrequent."

GRIFFIN IS PLANNING TO FORM TRADE BOARD

McKeand, secretary of the Southern Commercial Secretaries' association, to organize a board of trade here on a commission basis, and his agreement to spend a few days here free of charge in formulating plans for the work, has created much enthusiastic interest in the Merchants' association and among the leading business men, who realize the need of such an organization in Griffin.

President C. A. Jones announces a strong committee to outline plans of procedure and arrange for the preliminary work. Besides Mayor J. H. Smith and C. A. Jones, who is president of the board, other prominent business men on the committee are J. P. Persons, J. R. Thaxton, F. J. Staton, J. E. Brewer and J. W. Gresham.

EXAMINATION

A pair of glasses are more than worthless if the lenses are not absolutely correct. The correct lenses cannot be properly fitted unless a careful examination is made by a competent and skillful operator, aided by the best scientific eye-testing instruments and appliances. Of course the comfort of a pair of glasses depends a great deal on the fit of the frames, the proper adjustment of eye-glass mountings to the nose, and upon the size and shape of lenses. But primarily and most important of all is the correct fitting of the lenses. The experience necessary to properly diagnose a difficult case of eye trouble requiring correction by glasses, is not obtained in a day, and the longer these years of experience the more you can depend upon the results obtained by your optician. Our fifty years' growth has produced for you the very best optical service obtainable. We offer you the best equipped fitting rooms, the very latest styles of frames and mountings, the newest shapes and tints of lenses, the Kryptok Invisible Bifocals, moderate prices, and we make every possible effort to serve you pleasantly and satisfactorily. WORKING TO IMPROVE FARMING CONDITIONS

American Commission Closely Studying the Systems in European Countries.

Rome, May 25.—A most important task, whose solution will be of the greatest interest to the American farmer has been undertaken by the American commission on agricultural organization, co-operation and rural credits now studying the systems at work in various countries in Europe.

During the voyage from the United States the members decided to depart from the original intention of merely investigating the systems of European rural credits, as it was considered that so narow a subject would tend against the usefulness of the commission. The scope of the work was therefore enlarged to embrace the whole subject of co-operative effort as it touches agriculture and rural life.

The members divided into four subcommittees dealing with the subjects of finance, production, distribution and organization of agriculture and country life.

The first subcommittee has started an investigation into all forms of banking and credit affecting the agriculturists, whether co-operative or non-co-operative, but is paying especial attention to the former, as it is desired to disseminate into the North American continent some practical principle of self-help. All the bankers and financiers accompanying the commission are on this subcommittee.

Practical farming is being investigated by the second subcommittee, and it is inquiring into the European associations formed for the purpose of increasing the fertility of the soil or the quality of crops and live stock. The members are devoting attention to the successful cow-testing associations of Denmark and other countries.

The third subcommittee is gathering information as to organizations handling farmer's implements with the object of eliminating undue profits by middle men or large combinations of dealers.

Work of a more theoretical nature has been undertaken by the fourth subcommittee. It deals with the objects and rules of organizations aiming at the betterment of rural life, schools, conditions of family life and methods employed in organizing and maintaining farmer's unions. It is studying in the first place of traveling government commissions of Italy which work for the benefit of the rural population but is also investigating semi-official and voluntary organizations.

The work of the commission really falls into three main channes—first, observation in Europe of what has been done; second, observation in the British Isles (chiefly in Ireland) of the way in which it is being done and third, and perhaps most important, the working out of a scheme by which the results of this observation may be made applicable to the widely differing conditions of the various American states and of the provinces of Canada.

Dr. Butterfield, of Massachusetts, has been nominated president of the commission, Colonel Harvey Jordan, of Georgia, secretary, and Dr. Owens, of Washington, D. C. managing director. All of them are members of the federal commission appointed by President Wilson which is accompanying and co-operating with the American commission.

THOMASVILLE CLUB PROPERTY IS SOLD

Thomasville, Ga., May 25.—(Special.) The Country club property just out of Thomasville has been sold to Craig ford Livingston, of St. Paul, Minn., the price paid for it being $25,000. There are 235 acres comprised in this property, which for location and beauty of scenery is hard to surpass. There is a pretty club house on the property which was a popular resort for northern visitors in the days when Thomasville entertained numbers of winter tourists from all over the country.

Since the resort hotels here have been discontinued the club feature has been to a great extent given up and the golf links little used. The company owning the property has been anxious for some time to sell it, but preferred to dispose of it to some one who could keep it in a measure as it is instead of having it cut up into small lots. It is understood that Mr. Livingston will build a handsome winter home at an early date and no more beautiful situation for one could be found in the south. Mr. Livingston is well-known here having, with his family, spent several winters here. He is a man of wealth and will add another to the list of millionaire winter residents of Thomasville.

POPE GIVES WELCOME TO MANY PILGRIMS

Rome, May 25.—The pope received this morning in audience, in consistorial hall, 200 persons, including 20 or more Americans. The pontiff appeared in excellent health. In delivering a short address his voice was resonant. He thanked them for the visit and expressed the wish that for this act of filial piety, God would bless them beneficiently.

In the afternoon the pope received in audience a great number of Viennese pilgrims who were accompanied by the Austrian ambassador. This reception took place also in consistorial hall, although it had been arranged to have the pilgrims gather in the court of San Damaso.

The Symbolic Key.

(From American Tailor and Cutter.)

Art, music and poetry have in all ages been considered the polite arts, but what is art without the proper portrayal of the dress of the age that it seeks to represent? What is music that does not bring inspiration from the masters of he past who were clothed in the power to give us glimpses of men and ideals of whom the only lasting impression can be gained by the form our imaginations give to them? And our imaginations clothe them in robes in which their creators sent them out on their errants of giving the world higher ideals. Then what is poetry but thought clothed in words? No matter from what side viewed, the figure of speech of clothing is the symbolic key that gives entrance to these higher realms, and therefore why should not clothes themselves touch the hem of the garments of the arts, with which they are so closely in touch?

FLOWERS DISTRIBUTED BY CHURCH MEMBERS

Jails, Hospitals and Charitable Institutions Visited by Ladies and Children.

With wreaths of roses and floral garlands of many hues members of the First Christian church visited the jails, hospitals and charitable institutions of Atlanta Sunday afternoon, distributing over 1,000 bouquets of flowers, which the 150 members of the church and children of the Sunday school had gathered.

Since the innovation was introduced one year ago, Flower Day has been established as an annual event at the First Christian church, and this year even surpassed the success of one year ago, when the city's poor and unfortunate were showered with the floral offerings.

All the flowers, which later were distributed by committees of church workers, were placed in the front of the church and decorated the choir loft throughout the floral service. Dr. Bricker's sermon was based on the text, "The Lilies, How They Grow."

Why We Are Growing Fat.

(From The American Magazine.)

There are so many lost arts nowadays that one hesitates to add any more. We are told that letter-writing is a lost art, and conversation. We are sure that doing nothing must be, because so many women develop neurathenia when they attempt to practice it. The critics of the drama assure us that acting it, and the critics of literature that poetry is.

Yet, at the danger of overcrowding the mortuary chapel of the arts, a long observation of our highways, byways and the mountain trails has persuaded us that the art of walking has now perished also, and must be assigned to the same mournful resting place. Nobody walks any more, except the Appalachian club, the Boy Scouts and President John Finley, of the College of the City of New York—really walks, that is. Walking is still practiced (as little as possible) utilitarianly. Many New York women, for example, totter on dizzy heels from their motors at the curb all the way across the sidewalk. But as an art it is no longer practiced. The secret has been forgotten by all save a chosen few—of whom of course we are one!

We hold no brief against motors. What's the use? Besides, they are very useful things in getting you to a convenient starting point for a walk. The only trouble with motors is that people stay in them. The yankee type used to be lank and sinewy. Pioneers and pedestrians are always more or less lank and sinewy. But the motors are altering our type. We are growing fat and soft-footed. The man who takes a 21-mile walk for the fun of it is looked upon as a mild sort of lunatic. Why walk when a motor will get you there so much quicker?

Women Busy On the Edition To Be Published On June 4

The central office of the Woman's Edition of The Constitution was a scene of energy and activity Saturday in the many interested women who are working to complete the Woman's Edition to be published the 4th of June.

While Mrs. J. Lindsay Johnson wrote editorials and edited copy, and gave out all the information editorial chiefs are called upon to give, Mrs. Nicolas Peterson, of Tifton, brought an interesting message from the district meeting at Norcross, Ga., where the women pledged themseves to work for circulation. She is district editor, and has, through her individual effort, done a splendid work for the edition. Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale, manager of the department of advertising, was busy with her corps of assistants, and Mrs. Frank Nealey announced the completion of important work under her direction.

Busy as Managing Editors.

Mrs. Hugh Willet, Mrs. F. J. Spratling and Mrs. Ben Phillips were fulfilling the duties of managing editors, and Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. William Percy and others were finishing the story they will present of the work of Atlanta's organized women.

Mrs. Samuel Inman, editor of art, and Mrs. T. B. Felder, editor of the drama, were at their posts and Mrs. R. L. Cooney as editor of society was planning a live and interesting department.

Mrs. Woods White's department of music will be a brilliant feature of the edition, she working upon it Saturday, while Mrs. A. P. Coles, as city editor, with her staff, promise to give professionals some points on local reporting. Mrs. Nash Broyles was working on her department of sports, and Mrs. J. P. McGovern directed with her usual skill and patience many lines of work.

The Meeting Tuesday.

The meeting Tuesday at 11 o'clock will be a most important one, and every woman interested in any way in the edition is urged to be present.

A group of citizens Saturday contributed a page to the Georgia School of Technology, the various purposes, departments and needs of the school to be exploited.

Mrs. J. Lindsay Johnson, editor in chief of the paper; Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Mrs. J. F. McGovern and Mrs. Chas. J. Haden will be in the Woman's Edition office of The Constitution every day until the publication of the paper. Mrs. R. B. Parker, business manager, will be there, and in her absence her secretary, Miss Elder, will represent her. Mrs. Massengale will be at the office morning and afternoon, or her representative, and the department of circulation will have a manager.

Ninth District Women Meet.

The Ninth district department of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs met Friday at Norcross, Ga. Mrs. F. S. Shippen, district president, presided, and was introduced by Mrs. McElroy, president of the Woman's Club of Norcross. Superintendent Gilbert, of the public schools, addressed the ladies a welcome representing the mayor of the city as well as the schools.

Mrs. Clements spoke for the Woman's club, and Mrs. McElroy for the U. D. C., and to all the addresses of welcome Mrs. Allman, of Toccoa, made response. Seven new clubs were reported as added to the district number since the last meeting.

Club reports were read from five different clubs indicating their efficiency and activity. Dinner was served in the auditorium of the school building, where the meeting took place.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Nicolas Peterson, president of the district chairmen, made a charming address, and presented to the district club women the story of the Woman's Edition. Enthusiastic support was pledged to the circulation part of the work. The district meeting next year will be at Canton. The Toccoa News was named official organ of the ninth district.

MEMMINGER TO ADDRESS LUCY COBB GRADUATES

Athens, Ga., May 25.—(Special.)—Rev. Hugh K. Walker, D. D., preached the baccalaureate sermon today at 11 o'clock in Seney-Stovall chapel on the occasion of the fifty-fifth commencement of Lucy Cobb institute. The sermon was one of beauty of thought and finish in expression and delivery. Dr. Walker this evening led the vesper service at the chapel.

Last night the commencement season at this historic old school, one of the graduates of which this year is the daughter of the governor, opened with the presentation of Percy Mackaye's beautiful Jeanne d'Arc, presented by the pupils of the oratory department, under the direction of Miss Carolyn Cobb.

The graduating exercises will be held at 5:30 tomorrow evening, the address to be delivered by Dr. W. W. Memminger, of Atlanta. Dr. Memminger is a scholar of rare culture and his address will be one of the most enjoyable features of Athens' commencement season.

The annual concert will be given tomorrow evening at 8:15 in Seney-Stovall chapel, and all who will attend the reception to the graduating class are cordially invited to be present. The program, which is a delightful one, will be given by the most advanced pupils in the music department, though the selections given will be light enough to be enjoyed by all persons who love good music but who are not themselves musicians.

GRADUATING EXERCISES AT STATE NORMAL TODAY

Athens, Ga., May 25.—(Special.)—One of the shortest and best commencement sermons delivered in this city of commencements was that this morning of Dr. A. J. Moncrief, of Barnesville, before the students of the State Normal school. He spoke on "As a Man Thinketh in His Heart So Is He," and preached a direct, unembellished sermon on the inspiration of right thinking, the ideals of thought that are to be expressed in lives and character and achievement.

The annual concert last night at the state normal was one of the best ever given there. The baccalaureate address will be delivered Monday morning at 11:15 by President S. C. Mitchell, of the University of South Carolina. The graduating exercises are to occur Monday with graduates representing 121 counties of the state.

At Your Dealers

We believe more merchants that should advertise would do so if they could be made to understand that advertising isn't a one-day proposition.

With the exception of offers of goods at special prices for one or two days, the great value of continuous advertising lies in its cumulative effect.

You may not buy a safety razor today, tomorrow or next week. When you do buy, you are quite likely to buy a certain make that you have seen advertised everywhere—frequently in your morning paper. The advertising has impressed on you the merits and name of this safety razor and prepared you for the purchase.

Isn't it logical to suppose that you, too, can use advertising to the same end? to not only make sales today, but to impress on the memory of the readers the desirability of your goods, and your name? prepare them to buy from you when they do need goods like you offer?

And, how can you reach them to better advantage than from the columns of The Constitution, their morning newspaper, read at the beginning of each day, when new needs are known?

WATERWAY PREDICTED ACROSS NICARAGUA

Minister Castrillo Says United States Will Build—2,000 Miles Shorter Than Panama Route.

Washington, May 25.—Another great Atlantic-Pacific waterway, making a ship route between the eastern and western coasts of the United States 2,000 miles shorter than through the Panama canal, will be built soon by the United States, in the opinion of Dr. Salvador Castrillo, retiring Nicaraguan minister. Dr. Castrillo, who leaves this week for Europe on an important mission for his government, declared in a statement tonight that he believed a canal treaty would be negotiated between the United States and Nicaragua and that a canal would be constructed across his country.

The Nicaraguan diplomat has been a frequent caller at the state department since Secretary Bryan came into office and the latter, after an extensive study of the problems involved in the proposed treaty negotiations, has said that his mind is open.

The canal treaty, an inheritance from the Taft administration, was negotiated by Minister Weitzel last winter and has received the approval of the Nicaraguan government. By its terms Nicaragua, for $3,000,000 would grant the constructi[illegible] CMPW yp United States the exclusive right to construct a canal across Nicaragua by way of San Juan river and Lake Nicaragua. This government also would have a right to acquire a coaling station in the bay of Fonseca, on the Pacific side of the coast.

"I am greatly encouraged by Mr. Bryan's assurance that he has a broad view of the subject," said Dr. Castrillo.

He believes the Nicaraguan canal is a commercial necessity. "After all," he said, "the Panama canal is of military and strategic importance, but when it is realized that the Nicaraguan canal would shorten the route to the Pacific coast by an additional 2,000 miles, I am convinced that it will be built. When the first of the great Pacific railroads was built across the United States it was thought that it would be sufficient for all commercial needs. It, however, only served to emphasize the demand for other lines which were speedily built."

Dr. Castrillo has not been able to reach an understanding with the state department in the Nicaraguan loan negotiations. Secretary Bryan has favored the deal with the New York bankers, but he has not given assurances that will satisfy the New York financiers. The doctor's European mission will take him to France, Spain, Belgium, Italy and probably other countries. His successor in the Washington ministry, General Chamorro, is already here.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Huntsville, Ala., May 26.—(Special.) Buster Owens, a young man of Abington village, was arrested and lodged in jail last night on a charge of highway robbery. A man named Holder is his alleged victim. Holder was relieved of $15 in money, a gold watch, fountain pen, stick pin, pocket knife and other articles of smaller value, while intoxicated.

The police suspected Owens, and Officers Short and Gurley found him on a spree in Dallas. When arrested he had a concealed pistol which furnished grounds for an additional charge. Owens was arrested several months ago on suspicion of being concerned in the robbery of the postoffice at Chase, Ala., but this charge was later dismissed.

COTTON TRADE WAITING ON CONDITION REPORT

It Will Be Made Thursday, June 5—Bulls Are Looking for Low Figures.

New Orleans, May 25.—The coming week in the cotton market does not promise much activity. In the first place the local market will close Friday night, while the New York market will close Thursday night, making a short week. In the second place, the first government report on the condition of the new crop will be issued Thursday, June 5, which means that the average trader will even up this week rather than increase his commitments. The holidays will tend to intensify this desire to even up.

As yet the coming condition report has not caused very much comment, and there was a surprising dearth of private estimates on condition this week. It can hardly be said that the trade has yet formed any very definite opinion of what to expect, save that the bulls seem to look for figures under the ten year average of 79.9 per cent, while the bears look for something over 80. A year ago the percentage of condition was returned to 78.8 and two years ago at 87.8. This year the ten year average has been selected as a fairer comparison than any, although, of course, reports and estimates during the week to come may develop entirely new opinions. It is generally considered that this first report is altogether too early to be of any value, especially in a year like this, when a part of the crop is had a late start. The pending report will carry the crop down to today.

While weather conditions this week will have no effect on the first condition report they will probably have much to do with the course of prices especially if they are very good or very bad. Taking the belt as a whole, sufficient moisture for the time being has fallen and what is most desired now is warm, bright weather that will bring late planted cotton up, cause good growth on young cotton and allow chopping to proceed. It is probable that more precipitation, unless it comes in the form of light showers, should be regarded as highly unfavorable, and would lead to higher prices, while dry and warm weather would work against the market.

ENGINEERS TO HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICES

Four locals of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, located in Atlanta, Nos. 207, 268, 684 and 696, will hold memorial services at St. John's Methodist church on Georgia avenue Sunday afternoon, June 8, at 3 o'clock.

Each local created a committee of three members some weeks ago and a half dozen meetings have been held, preparing a program for the afternoon. The committee is composed of W. F. Hetzell, J. A. Ray and W. W. Harris, all of the Western and Atlantic railway from 207; G. Russell, R. B. Devers and R. E. Williams, of the Southern from 368; C. E. Evans, James T. Kennedy and William Payne, of 684, from the Seaboard Air Line railway, and C. C. Blackman, E. L. Clopton and John Lambert, of 696, from the Southern railway.

Dr. George M. Bakes, pastor of the church, will deliver the memorial sermon and will be followed by James L. Mayson, city attorney. Rev. T. H. Harrison, now of Nashville but an old resident of Atlanta, will be master of ceremonies and will also address the assembly.

The committee is arranging for an unusually attractive floral decoration of the church for the afternoon services.

UNSETTLED WEATHER FOR FIRST OF WEEK

Washington, May 25.—Unsettled weather will open the coming week throughout the country east of the Missouri river, according to the weather bureau's weekly bulletin.

"There will be showers Monday and Tuesday in the great central valleys and the lake region," the bulletin said, "and on Tuesday or Wednesday in the middle Atlantic states and New England. For the south and southwest and the extreme central west, present indications favor fair weather generally.

"In the northwest about the middle of the week local showers are probable.

"It will be warmer in the south, but there are no immediate prospects of unseasonably warm weather over any portion of the country. There will be frosts Monday morning in the interior of New England and eastern New York, and low temperatures will continue for a day or two over the northern and eastern portions of the country, followed by warmer conditions by the middle of the week."

FORT MOULTRIE EXPLOSION TO BE PROBED

Authorities of Fort Moultrie, on Sullivan island, at the entrance to Charleston harbor, about a mile from Fort Sumter, were compelled to answer to the war department at Washington concerning the explosion of the gun which killed several soldiers and wounded many more. Privates Baker and Christensen were killed. They were cut in two and died instantly. Private Dalton was dangerously wounded. Captain Hanna, who was standing near with several other officers of the coast artillery, was badly wounded in the side by a fragment of the exploded cannon. He died later on the operating table. Many others were hurt. Four companies of coast artillery—the Sixteenth, Seventy-eighth, One Hundred and Forty-fourth and One Hundred and Forty-fifth—are stationed there. Of these the Sixteenth and One Hundred and Forty-fourth are mine-laying companies. The fort is in command of Colonel H. Ludlow; Captain W. Peterson, adjutant, and Captain A. G. Jenkins, quartermaster.

Washington and Jefferson "Boys" Meet at Presbyterian Assembly

One of the happiest features of the Presbyterian assemblies in Atlanta last week was the informal reunion of the "old boys" of the ancient Washington and Jefferson colleges, of Washington county, Pennsylvania, two of the staunchest institutions of the church and famous for the masterly men they have sent into the world of active affairs. There was no formal dinner, no speech-making, no college yelling, but the reunion was there, just the same. It came off whenever an "old grad" of '67 met a youngster of '39 and the two fell to talking of class room and campus at old Washington and Jefferson.

Time was when the two Pennsylvania colleges were well known to the south, when Georgia boys of Presbyterian families were accustomed to journey, there for study. In the years before the war Matthew Brown, D.D., was president of Washington and of Jefferson—they were separate colleges then—and Dr. Brown was a familiar figure in Georgia. He was an intimate friend of Robert Toombs and Howell Cobb and other Georgians of that day of intellectual giants, and his visits to Atlanta took place as often as college duties would allow. It was Dr. Brown's influence that sent so many young southerners to Washington and Jefferson.

Southern Patronage Falls Off.

In 1865, just at the close of the civil war, the two colleges, which had been conducted separately, were combined, and they have been one institution since then. Southern patronage fell off in those troublous times, of course, and it was years after the war before the south began sending its sons north again. Now the flame of old Washington and Jefferson is being recognized again and more southern students are becoming enrolled. The coming of the Presbyterian assemblies to Atlanta has undoubtedly awakened great interest in the old institution, for there were many graduates of the college among the foremost commissioners to the assemblies.

Among the commissioners who are graduates of the united Washington and Jefferson colleges are:

Rev. David M. Skilling, D.D., St. Louis; Rev. Francis M. Hall, Conneautville, Pa.; Rev. R. S. Inglis, D.D., Newark, N. J.; Rev. K. P. Simmons, Bellesville, Ohio; Rev. C. J. McKee, Washington, Pa.; Rev. W. S. McKee, Monongahela, Pa.; Rev. Joseph L. Ewing, Jersey Shore, Pa.; Rev. S. Hall Young, Alaska; Rev. James H. Snowden, D.D., editor of the Presbyterian Banner and professor of systematic theology in Western Theological seminary; Rev. George W. Pollock, Buchanan, West Virginia; Rev. Joseph L. Weaver, New York City; Rev. A. S. Hunter, D.D., University of Pittsburg; Rev. John A. Marquis, D.D., president of Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Rev. George Gillespie, D.D., Coatesville, Pa.; Rev. Stephen A. Hunter, D.D., for many years a missionary to China, now a resident of Pittsburg; Rev. James R. Hill, Brookville, Pa.; Rev. Marcus W. Brownson, D.D., of Philadelphia; Rev. D. F. McGill, D.D., stated clerk of the United Presbyterian assembly; Rev. John Hance, Rock Island, Ill.; Rev. R. E. McClure, of Blairsville, Pa.

Among the commissioners who were graduates of old Jefferson before it was merged with Washington, were Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, of the New York Avenue church, Washington, D. C., who was moderator of the assembly at Winona in 1888; Rev. W. B. Noble, D. D., Coronado Beach, Cal., for years permanent clerk of the Presbyterian assembly, and Dr. Laughlin, of Barnesville, Ohio, who arranged the last surrender of Atlanta in the civil war. Only one of the "old boys" of Washington was here—Rev. John W. Dinsmore, of San Jose, Cal.

The old college numbers among the names on its honor roll those of many men who climbed into high positions in the church, in statecraft, in business.

Rev. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, father of President Woodrow Wilson, was for some years pastor of the Hill church, at Cannonsburg, the seat of old Jefferson college, and during his pastorate was professor of rhetoric in the college. He was a graduate of the class of 1844.

James F. Woodrow, too, an uncle of the president, was a graduate of the class of 1849 at Jefferson. He afterward became a professor in the Columbia, S. C., Theological seminary, and while there underwent a trial before the Presbyterian general assembly, south, for his advocacy of the doctrine of evolution, in which he was acquitted.

Another famous graduate of Jefferson was Rev. George Junkin, who afterward was president of Lafayette college, and whose daughter became the wife of General Stonewall Jackson.

In the list of the graduates of the old Jefferson were Rev. James G. Carson, of the United Presbyterian seminary at Zenta, Ohio; Professor Alonzo Linn, for years professor of Greek and Latin at Jefferson, and later Washington and Jefferson. They were classmates of Professor Woodrow.

Dr. William Plummer, of Columbia, S. C., seminary, was a Jefferson graduate, as was Governor Israel Pickens, one of the early governors of Alabama.

Among the graduates who became moderators of the Northern church were Rev. D. C. Marquis, D. D., late of McCormick Theological seminary at Chicago; Rev. Samuel J. Nichols, of St. Louis, Mo.; Rev. George P. Hayes, now deceased, for years president of Washington and Jefferson. They were all classmates.

MERCURY TABLETS FAIL TO KILL CHICAGO MAN

McCutcheon Took Three Bichloride Tablets, but Doctors Say He Will Recover.

Chicago, May 25.—W. L. McCutcheon, an automobile salesman, who took three bichloride of mercury tablets by mistake, and whom doctors yesterday thought was sentenced to death, received his reprieve today.

Physicians decided that McCutcheon had eliminated most of the poison from probability he would recover. McCutcheon was taken to his home tonight. It will be necessary to watch his condition carefully for several days, however.

The automobile salesman suffered little today. He retained his consciousness. Frequently he discussed the case of B. Sanders Walker, the Macon, Ga., banker, who died last week from the same poison, accidentally taken. Before the doctors told him of his chance for recovery, McCutcheon spoke of the statement attributed to Walker before he died: "If this is dying," the Georgia man is quoted as saying, his stomach before it had entered the intestines, and concluded that in all "no one need have fear of death." Prospects of an "easy death" apparently reassured him.

Except for the nausea[illegible] immediately following his taking the poison, McCutcheon has felt no sickness. "It is hard to believe that a person who feels perfectly well is in any danger of death," he said.

Mc. McCutcheon declared he would accept the assurance of recovery and prepare for life by remaining in bed under the constant watch of his physician.

CIGARETTE QUARREL RESULTS IN TRAGEDY

Charlotte, N. C., May 25.—Following a dispute, which it is claimed was brought on by a demand for cigarettes to be sold on Sunday, which is a violation of the Charlotte Sunday laws, W. B. Stevens, commissary clerk of the Norfolk Southern railroad, shot and perhaps fatally wounded S. Smith, chief of the construction force engaged in building the railroad into this city. The shooting took place in the commissary car of the company standing on a siding in this city. Smith's intestines were perforated by two shots and attending physicians hold out no hope for his recovery. Stevens surrendered and was placed in jail. He claims self defense.

An unusual literary treat was afforded the large audience at Miss Woodberry's school commencement in the brilliant address of the Rev. W. W. Memminger, who held them with enthusiasm and interest on the occasion of his address to the graduating class.

His words were full of wit and wisdom, a thoughtful discussion of the great problems that touch even the most uneventful lives, and an earnest exhortation to choose the highest ideals and lead the life of vision.

The Rt. Rev. C. K. Nelson addressed the graduates, paying high tribute to the school and its management.

The Rev. C. T. A. Pise, D. D., in his baccalaureate sermon, stressed the importance of the young women developing the virtues of self-reliance and fortitude and courage, and independence of thought.

Miss Rosa Woodberry, in closing, spoke of the exceptional grade of scholarship of the present class, their thoroughness and initiative, shown also in the many lines of independent work accomplished. She commended their college annual for its literary ability and their many literary programs. After a few words of loving counsel, she delivered the diplomas.

The graduates are Misses Amelia Malone, Lamar Coleman, Clarisse Ryan, Edith McCool, Annie Lou Hunter, Mary Ella Gibson, Lottie Hancock, Fay Taylor, Harriette Broyles, and certificate graduates in English, history and general literature, Misses Elliott Johnson, Nan Edith Outland, Mary Myers. WHIFFS

Only Broke Even.

THE CRACKERS only succeeded in breaking even during the past week at home, winning two out of three from the Turties and losing two out of three to the Gulls. It is to be hoped that during the coming week Billy Smith's boys pull themselves together and make a clean sweep.

Analyzing Gulls.

AFTER SEEING Mike Finn's Gulls in action for three days we are free to admit that he has a mighty nice looking ball club, one that is fairly well balanced, but no world-beater. They are not the kind of a team that with a poor brand of pitching can go out and bang in enough runs to win just the same. If their pitchers falter they are likely to slip and slip fast. If the hurlers come through, they are going to be hard to head.

Team Play Counts.

THE GULLS have been winning on team play. Without any particular stars, barring possibly their hurling staff and the hard-hitting Robertson, they have been winning games a plenty. It is because Finn has been able to get concerted effort out of them. It looks like just about the kind of a team with which Bill Smith won a pennant in 1909, a great pitching staff, one good hitter and a consistent pair of workers behind the bat.

Deserving of Better.

KING BRADY has been working like a truck horse all season. Yet he has not been winning the number of ball games that he should, with the class of ball that he has been twirling. It is to be hoped that the next time he hurls, the Crackers will get over their butter-fingered habits and will regain their batting eyes. Brady ought to win way over .600 per cent of his games, with the form that he has shown this season. He has yet to pitch a bad game, yet look at the games he has lost!

The Winning Mood.

THE LOCALS need a little self-confidence, a belief that they are better than any team in the league. They have the class. With a little more pepper in encouraging their pitcher when they are in the field, a little more pepper on the attack and the pitchers would not have to work better than two or three-run games to win. With concerted action, the locals can pile up a big enough margin to win a majority of the games.

Get the Habit.

THE TEAM has not recovered completely from the slump that it hit on the road trip, due mostly to bad pitching, but a few games won in a row this week will give it the habit and when a team gets the winning habit, keep your eyes on them. If the Crackers ever get it, there will be a new leader before another month has rolled by. The club is formidable, a little of that "college spirit" would help. Let's see, boys, we're right with you. Now all together that long delayed winning streak!

"Hal Streak!"

In t
rent Runner Through.

JOHN PAUL JONES, the great Cornell mile runner, has announced his intention of retiring from the cinder path after the intercollegiate track meet at Cambridge next Saturday. He has an engineering position in Pittsburg that he will accept. Pittsburg friends, however, will persuade him to continue his athletic activities under the colors of the Pittsburg Athletic association.

Has Lost Out.

MARY CELHOUN, former Tech first baseman, has lost out in his fight for a position at first base on the Boston Braves. The former Jacket has been sold to the Wilkesbarre club of the New York State league, by Manager Stallings.

Stovall Sorry.

THE BROWNS' manager is glad to be reinstated again. He makes the following statement, concerning his reinstatement and the penalty attached: "Why, certainly I will apologize. I have done so by mail and will do so when I see the umpire. You understand my action was on the impulse of the moment, and I realize better than anybody else that it was not a gentlemanly act. Having committed a breach, I am glad of the chance to set it right. If a person makes a mistake and does not acknowledge it I don't consider him much of a man."

Good Suggestion.

SILK O'LOUGHLIN, the veteran American League umpire, blames the dragging of baseball games on the managers. "It is their instructions to some pitchers that lengthen out the games," he says. "Many a time you have seen a pitcher take more than a usual length of time to pitch each ball. He is acting under instructions from his manager. If this was eliminated, and the pitchers instructed to get in there and pitch, I am sure the games would be shortened."

Cleveland and Brooklyn Are Outslugging Teams In Majors This Season

The Cleveland Americans and the Brooklyn Nationals have the best slugging teams in the major league this season, the former having a slugging average of .387 and the latter .375.

Cleveland and Pittsburg have made the most doubles, Cleveland and Brooklyn the most triples, both Philadelphia teams the most homers, the Red Sox and the Cubs the most sacrifice hases and Cleveland and Pittsburg the most stolen bases.

Southern League Trailers At Ponce de Leon Today; Dent Will Probably Hurl

Charley Frank and his trailing Pelicans will arrive here shortly before noon this morning from Mobile, where they went to play a Sunday game, and will be the attraction at Ponce de Leon this afternoon and on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The poor showing of the Birds has been the surprise of the Southern league season. Practically every scribe around the circuit picked them to be right up among the leaders and to see New Orleans trailing the bunch is something unusual.

Just why such a condition exists has not been clearly explained. To the casual observer, their main fault is that they lack pitchers, a fault that seems to be the main trouble with most of the Southern league teams. Add to this the fact that the Pelicans have proven themselves the poorest fielders in the league this year and the riddle is solved.

Dent May Pitch.

Elliott Dent or Bill Chappelle, with the chances favoring the former, will probably be the selection of Manager Smith to face the Gulls in the opener this afternoon.

Dent should win his game, if he twirls the kind of ball that he showed against the Turtles for the first six innings, and provided he does not get any glaringly bad support.

Dent has the stuff and he has confidence in his ability to deliver it. He is not disheartened over his first defeat. Just the opposite. He is pronged to hurl even better against the Pels this afternoon.

Just who will oppose Dent is not known, but the chances are that Josh Swindell will draw the assignment.

Familiar Faces.

Some familiar faces will be seen in the Pelican line-up, faces that are well known to the fans of the city in former seasons. Among them are Jakey Atz at second, Frank Manush at third, Rebel Williams, former Cracker, at short; Harry McIntyre in the box, Tim Hendryx in center, Spencer in left, Jack Adams behind the bat and Josh Swindell on the hill.

The new faces will be Snedecor, the former University of Alabama first baseman; Breen, who has been playing in the outfield for Montgomery this season, and is now in right for the Pels; Robertson behind the bat, as, Brenton, Wilson and Evans in the box.

Yantz and Angemeier, the regulars behind the bat, are both laid up with injuries, and Robertson and Adams, the latter having just been purchased, are dividing the receiving honors.

The following is the probable line-up and batting order of the teams:

NEW ORLEANS. ATLANTA.

Turtles 4, Billies 2.

Memphis, Tenn., May 25.—Montgomery outhit Memphis today, but the home team bunched theirs and won, 4 to 2. Two two-baggers and three singles in the second inning gave Memphis three runs. Case relieved Manning, pitching for Montgomery, after the third inning, and allowed one hit during the remainder of the game. Parsons was steady throughout, and was given errorless support. Walker's hitting for Montgomery featured.

Fast Practice Laps Made On Indianapolis Speedway; Big Race Comes Off Friday

Indianapolis, Ind., May 25.—(Special.)—Ten thousand speed fans who have had their interest in the third annual 500-mile international sweepstakes race, which will be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30, awakened by the arrival of the foreign cars and drivers and the fast time made by the majority of the speeders in practice during the last week, gathered at the speedway this afternoon to see the cars work out.

The big grandstand near the tape was well filled, many of the spectators seemed to prefer places near the turns where there is always a chance for a spill when the drivers take the curve at too great a speed.

Louis Disbrow, in the old Jay Tye See car, carried off the honors of the day when he came down the stretch at a speed of 109 miles an hour. Nikrent and Endicott also were out with their cars and did some fast laps, as did the Stutz and Henderson cars. The Frenchmen, Goux and Zucarrelli, are having some tire trouble, caused by their reckless manner in taking the turns. Goux rides high on the curves and takes them at great speed, his car bounding sideways.

Guyot Arrives.

Albert Guyot, the French pilot who will drive the English Sunbeam, arrived yesterday and will begin work at once.

The big Frenchman brought a large force of mechanics and assistants with him, including Robert F. Crossman, the engineer from the Sunbeam factory at Wolverhampton, England, who will act as his relief driver. It is said that Crossman knows the car piece by piece, having had a share in its designing and having superintended the assembling of the parts.

"My word," exclaimed Crossman, when he caught his first glimpse of the speedway yesterday. "I had no idea your track was anything like this. I have always understood that it was a fine course, but it never entered my mind that it could really be what it is. I am really astonished." Guyot was also favorably impressed, and expressed his pleasure through an interpreter.

There was a joyful reunion when Guyot met Goux and Zucarrelli. The three men have been friends for years, having participated in many of the biggest races in Europe together. Guyot was at Brooklands when Goux made his sensational hour record a few weeks ago. It was the original intention of the French drivers to leave Havre by the same boat, thus arriving in Indianapolis together, but Guyot found it necessary to delay his sailing, and so Goux and Zucarrelli started a week earlier.

First Practice.

The practice had much of the semblance of real racing. Don Herr, in his Stutz, put in some fast laps, drawing the plaudits of the crowd in the grandstands. Johnny Jenkins, with his Schacht, also proved a favorite. Jenkins has not been out Sunday much afternoon. Practice on Sunday was really his debut before the rail birds. While he has been working consistently he has not turned the early morning hours in which to try out his red and black racer.

The Amel car, equipped with a new steering gear, reappeared at the track and with Billy Liesaw in command gave an excellent account of itself. Liesaw says that from now on he will work and work hard every day. Ralph DePalma and Caleb Bragg took two of the Mercers out for an airing, and as they dashed down the straightway they resembled yellow streaks.

While rounding a turn, Disbrow's car threw a tire, which was hurled over a fence. The car held to the track, however, without any damage being done. It is said that Disbrow will probably attempt to lower the present speedway one-mile record with the Jay Eye See some day before the 500-mile race. The event will be electrically timed and will be under the supervision of the A. A. A. officials, so that it will be accepted by the governing body if a mark is hung up.

Charles P. Root, of Chicago, who will be the starter, together with other officials, was at the speedway in consultation with the management. Many points of importance concerning the conducting of the race were taken up and plans figured out whereby the event will be handled with the precision of clockwork. The race officials were deeply interested in the preparations which are being made for the event and carefully planned every detail.

An Income Tax Problem.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Here are some puzzles for collectors of the proposed income tax: that tax, be it understood, to be collected "at the source." A, B and C, on June 1 go to their bank boxes to cut coupons. A's total income is $1,000. B's is $10,000 and C's is $1,000,000. Under the law A should ultimately pay no tax, B must pay 1 per cent and C more than that. Each of these three men has only $500 worth of coupons to cut and deposit that day, and the bank being ordered by your Uncle Samuel to collect the income tax from each at the source proceeds to do so. How is the bank teller to know the amount to be deducted from each of the three batches of coupons?

Unless the teller be a financial who's who and knows the total income of every depositor in his bank, he can not know whether to deduct 1 per cent or more from the $500 handed to him.

Will it be necessary for every individual at every time he deposits a coupon to tell the teller what his annual income is, so as to be taxed properly?

The teller must take a tax of at least 1 per cent from everybody and then return, later, to the owner the sum provided he can prove his right to exemption. This rendered it certain that the government will take every one in its net and then let go those who are not obliged to pay. Thus, in order to catch the big fish, it must take all the fish in the ocean and then turn the little ones loose. Looks like an expensive way to do business, doesn't it?

Incidentally, it will be worth while to see what the courts will do about interpreting this queer law.

An Inscription for Poe.

(From The Baltimore News.)

That Maryland women may not lag behind others in veneration for the memory of Edgar Allan Poe, the Fortnightly club, of Walbrook, has suggested the following inscription for the Poe tablet which is to be erected in New York, and sent it to the committee in charge. It is from Poe's "Haunted Palace."

In the greenest of our valleys
By good angels tenanted—
Once a fair and stately palace
Radiant palace—reared its head.
In the monarch Thought's dominion,
It stood there!
Never seraph spread a pinion
Over fabric half so fair!
And with pearl and ruby growing
Was the fair palace door,
Through which came flowing, flowing, flowing
And sparkling evermore
A troop of echoes, whose sweet duty
Was but to sing
In voices of surpassing beauty
The wit and wisdom of their king.

AT THE THEATERS

"St. Elmo."

(At the Atlanta.)

This afternoon Miss Billy Long will begin her sixth week at the Atlanta with the presentation of "St. Elmo." This play was voted the choice of the patrons of the Atlanta, and has attracted considerable attention through means of the voting contest held. It is a play with a hold upon audiences. People like to see it time after time, and it is certain to attract big crowds to the Atlanta. Miss Long, Mr. Vail and other members of the company have been cast to greatest advantage and the production will be up to the high standard set. The play will be given every night this week, with the matinees today, Wednesday and Saturday.

Tabloid Musical Comedy.

(At the Bijou.)

Following the success of tabloid musical comedy and vaudeville at the Bijou last week, the management will offer for this week another combination of quality and power in Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," with a selected cast and a chorus of pretty girls who will add to the drawing power of the splendid little entertainment. The engagement will commence with matinee on Monday afternoon at 2:30, to be followed by another matinee immediately, and there will be two performances in the evening, the first at 7:30 o'clock and the second at 9 o'clock.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

Maggie Cline, the famous character comedienne, affectionately known as the "Irish Queen," and who has been before the public longer than any living theatrical star and always a favorite, is the headline attraction at the Forsyth this week, and the rest of the bill is of the highest and best known quality. Among the stars that are on the bill will be the Great Howard, the excellent Scotch ventriloquist. Another feature act will be Madden & Fitzpatrick in a novelty act. The Young Caruso, as Ceasare Nesi is known, is scheduled to score a hit, and Ethel Kirk and Billy Forsyth in an act of chatter and song will become popular. Others on the bill will be the Equill brothers in a novelty act and Carl Rosine & Co. "In magic.

The Service of Trees.

(From The Boston Transcript.

A queer superstition still lingers in New England towns which Alan Dale ought to contribute to abating, namely, that it is unhealthy to have trees planted near a house. It is one of the depressing sights of our countryside to see forlorn houses, with their, wals, doors and windows unshaded by either tree, shrub or vine, baking in the fierce summer heat. It would have cost nothing to leave them some of the original forest, or at least some of the tangle or wild shrubs and saplings by the roadside. To insure a pure and fragrant atmosphere and good drinking, man must accept from nature those tall green chimneys called trees. They imbibe and expel aloft into the air those hurtful gases which, if admitted to the lungs and brain, might injure the former and hinder the delicate movements of the latter.

Our towns and cities would be much more healthful if trees were called in to aid in the work of scavengers—not, however, the lopped and mutilated trees, such as disfigure many of the pretty suburbs of Philadelphia and Providence, which instead of purifying the atmosphere must be filled with harmful and corrupting miasm from the wounded veins. If people were thoroughly waked up to the importance of planting trees, it would not be long before our "2-decker" desedts and our country towns would become as inviting as they are now dreary and repellant. Instead of the dusty suburb, with the suns' rays in the heated term beating down pittilessly upon its shadeless walk from the door-stone pitilessly even than in the city, where the tall blocks generally assure at least one shaded sidewalk to every main thoroughfare—thickly planted trees would give a walk from the train or trolley, as welcome and pretty, in its way, as the streets of Paris or the linden shade of Berlin are lovely and fascinating.

ZBYSZKO BADLY HURT IN WRESTLING MATCH

Montreal, May 25.—Stanislaus Zbyszko, the Polish wrestler, is suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries as a result of a flying leap from the ring to the floor and alleged fouling tactics used by his opponent, Constant Lemarin, in a match here last night. It is not believed that his injuries will prove fatal.

The men had been wrestling only a few minutes when they plunged from the ring. Zbyszko was given bad cut over his left eye in the fall and the referee had to call time and have the wound attended, as the blood from it had completely covered the wrestlers.

When hostilities began again the Pole was the aggressor. He had secured a partial crotch and reverse half-Nelson when the Frenchman, it is alleged by the referee, fouled Zbyszko so fiercely that the contest was stopped and the decision awarded the Pole.

Zbyszko rose to his feet, but tottered and fell unconscious. He was taken to a hotel and an examination by the doctors disclosed a fractured skull. Zbyszko was to have met George Lurich, the Russian wrestler, next Wednesday in New York city.

Feature events planned include a driving and putting contest, a one-hole handicap foursome and a consolation handicap tournament.

Mrs. Frank G. Jones, of Memphis, is the present southern champion.

Olympic Champions Contest.

New York, May 25.—Several American and Olympic athletic champions took part in the postoffice clerks' track and field games at Celtic park today, but no records were equalled, owing to the condition of the grounds from recent rains. J. E. Meredith, of Philadelphia, an Olympic winner, won the main event, a one-half mile scratch run, in 1:56 4-5.

Pelkey Faces Manslaughter Charge for McCarty's Death

Calgary Alberta, May 25.—Arthur Pelkey, from whose stiff right hook near the heart Luther McCarty fell dead in the ring at the Burns' arena yesterday afternoon, will face a charge of manslaughter in police court here Monday. The Royal Northwest mounted police completed the necessary papers in the charge placed against him today.

Just before the death of McCarty was announced, it developed today, Pelkey had slipped into his street clothes at the request of his trainers and was taken to his hotel in an automobile. It was not until after he had washed and dressed that he learned of McCarty's death. He had started from the hotel when officers arrived and took him into custody.

An autopsy was held over the dead fighter's body late last night and an inquest will be held tomorrow afternoon. The result of the post-mortem is withheld pending an inquest.

Numerous doubts were expressed today as to the actual cause of death. It didn't seem as though there was sufficient force behind the blow to the heart to cause death, several have declared. Pelkey said he didn't believe this punch actually landed near the heart.

It was currently rumored here today that McCarty suffered from a slight weakness of the heart the last few days and this in conjunction with the excitement of the bout and the landing of the unexpected punch are generally blamed for his death.

McCarty's body will be taken to his birthplace at Hastings, Neb., Monday night.

The fatal ending will have the effect of putting the lid down tight on boxing contests in western Canada. Tommy Burns succeeded for just one year in running bouts at his arena located outside the city limits.

Betting on yesterday's contest was lively at two to one against Pelkey holding out for ten rounds, while McCarty was straight five-to-one favorite for the decision. It was not generally supposed that Pelkey could gain enough science in three weeks to give him a chance with McCarty. Pelkey showed a great deal of improvement over former appearances. During the brief contest he exhibited better judgment of distance than his opponent and also put more steam into his blows.

It was said unofficially today that as soon as the responsibility for McCarty's death has been placed, Pelkey will go south to meet "Gunboat" Smith.

Forest Fires.

(From The Indianapolis News.)

At Cisco, Placer county, California, where the railroad etracks cross th Sierra Nevada mountains, unusual precautions are token to battle against the deadly forest fires. The forest rangers are all mounted on powerful motorcycles, and a fast locomotive equipped with a scoop-like pilot and attached to two huge tank cars filled with water is 1 nreaddness day and night to fight the dreadful scourge. The equipment consists of 300 feet of hose, ladders and fire-fighting implements. A powerful pumping engine run from the locomotive boiler, forces water through the hose at a high pressure and the railroad service is guaranteed by a telephone service, and day and night watch kept by the government rangers.

An Invitation.

I entreat you, Alfred Tennyson,
Come and share my haunch of venison.
I have, too, a bin of claret,
Quite a choice one, that will suit it.
Though 'tis only a small bin,
There's a stock of it within.
And, as sure as I'm a rhymer,
Half a butt of Rudesheimer.
Come; among the sons of men is one
Welcomer than Alfred Tennyson?

EMPEROR OF JAPAN AND FAMILY

FARMS and FARMERS

Address all letters intended for this Department to Col. R. J. Redding, Editor of Farms and Farmers' Department, Griffin, Ga.

Cotton and the Weather.

On the 21st, instant, on the invitation of a city friend who farms quite extensively in the country, I went with him to see his farm and improve myself by a personal survey of the condition of his farms and crops in that section of Spalding county. Of course, I could not see many farms in the two or three hours' drive behind a jogging pony horse, but I assume that what I saw was a fair average of the county and the section known as middle Georgia. The rainfall of 72 hundredths of an inch on the 16th and 17th was already causing the cotton seed to crack the still moist surface of the ground, indicating that in a few days a stand of cotton—more or less perfect—would be in evidence. In most of the fields few plants came up two or three weeks ago from seed planted during the first week in two in April, but I did not see a row that carried a sufficient, unbroken stand for a distance of ten feet. Later planted cotton was not up at all, except now and then a plant or two where a pig flat foot had pressed a favored spot where the soil had carried a little moisture. On the whole I would say that of the fields planted up to May 21 there was not 10 per cent of a stand, so that the attempt practically was about as if the entire crop had been planted about May 15. It is fair to conclude that the average condition for the state is about the same, some sections a little better, others even worse. So we may conclude that the coming crop harvest will be no better than if the whole had been planted about the last mentioned date. If the late rains shall result in bringing up a good stand, and the rainfall and other weather and labor conditions shall continue perfect until the crop commences to open and lack frost postpone his advent three weeks, or a month later than usual, there will be no cause for (and observe) the farmers in this section and presumably of this state and other cotton fine, to complain of a failure of cotton. But we must not lose sight of the fact that the soil was poorly prepared and it will be some weeks before the clods will have crumbled back into mellow soil. On the whole, the condition is worse than in any year for a generation back, if not even longer, and the probabilities point to much smaller acreage yield than for a number of years. Just what the prospects are, west of Alabama and across the Mississippi seems not so well known. Recent rains have fallen pretty generally—too much in some sections. Reports are Texas and Oklahoma, our two droughtiest state, does not yet appear and these may be the best of the unpromising poor early conditions and swelling the grand total in the end.

It is to be devoutly wished that our weather bureau or other official authority would call for public a general weekly review of crop conditions, covering the whole country. The Sun is quite rich enough to supply needed funds for such a report, and believe it should be done. Forecasting is all well enough, when it comes true, but there need be no guess work about the weather of a past week.

A Late Crop Requires Fast Work.

A late planted cotton crop requires, in particulars, a different treatment from one that is planted at the usual time. In the first place the plants should be thinned to a permanent and final stand as quickly as possible. This does not necessarily imply that the plants should be chopped to one in a place at once, or the first chopping, for it is not to believe that is the best way to do it. The object is to get rid of the surplus as unnecessary plants as quickly as possible, by destroying as many as possible every day. In other words, the plants should be blocked out, leaving only one plant in a place when it may be done with the same work and cuts made away a full hoe's width of plants, but not stopping to reduce the number from two to one, but to go a stroke to one, but go ahead in a half walk and get over two or more acres in a day, or hand, thus destroying perhaps twice as many useless plants and twice as much grass in a day. Where a stand is secured the cultivator that will clean out and stir a 4-foot row at once going, accomplishing eight to ten acres a day and repeating the feat every two weeks, reducing rapid and vigorous growth and development of the plants, until the fruiting stage is reached. Speed!

Partly aiding to this end what fertilizers in the way of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia are to be used, should all be applied before blooming is well under way, or even earlier. Fertilisers consisting chiefly of acid phosphate and salts of potash should have been applied before planting and not now or hereafter.

Griffin, Ga., R. J. REDDING.

INDIGESTION OF HORSE.

W. B. Russell, Bess, Ala.—I have a horse 5 years old that got puny in February and would not eat over three ears of corn a day for two months. His gums were swollen down below his teeth, and are still swollen. I have worked him hard since the first of April. I notice his upper lip is full of pimples the size of a pin-head. And his bowels rolls and rumbles. Yes; have given Bee-Bee stock tonic. His bowels were constipated before I gave the tonic. He eats very heartily of corn and fodder and feed some. He is falling off every day and is almost a mere shedding. Please advise through The Constitution.

Answer—It may be that your horse has or had some inflammation of the mouth or some defect of the teeth that made painful to eat corn. When he was eating only three ears of corn per day and yet doing hard work was the time to "get busy" and find out what was the matter. In very many cases where an animal seems not to relish its food and does not eat heartily it is due to constant feeding on corn and fodder," without any change, and the trouble and the so-called indigestion would often be relieved by a change of food, especially when corn is the one grain that has been supplied. Oats is always a better food for hardworking animals and young-growing animals. Such changes of food, however, should always be accomplished gradually and not suddenly, taking say three or four days or a week to effect a complete change. A mixture of two parts shelled oats and one part corn (by measure) is an excellent grain ration. Bran and middlings is a good change and may be allowed once or twice a week, serving to keep the bowels in good condition, the appetite steady and the digestion good. The swelling of the base of the hard palate, just behind the upper front teeth, is in most cases no disease at all, but is perfectly natural and always occurs when the animal is eating. Sometimes the swelling is abnormal and is tender and interferes in eating corn. The practice of burning with a hot iron, however, is utterly inexcusable and barbarous. A few light strokes of a sharp-pointed knife blade just deep enough to cause bleeding is usually sufficient to relieve it. Give your horse about 1½ to 1¾ pints of raw linseed oil as a purge. When it ceases working him mix 4 ounces each of powdered copperas and saltpeter, divide into 24 powders and give one night and morning in a bran mash. Answer—Johnson grass in feeding is want of regularity in the matter of quantity, time and the watering. Always water before feeding and not within half an hour after feeding. Always give one-half hour between concluding a meal and going to work. Give green food when possible and any other change that may seem agreeable. See that the water is pure. Avoid sudden changes avoiding transient water. Examine his mouth and teeth and see if they are all right.

(1) WHAT AILED THE MARE. (2) COLT DISTEMPER. (3) BOOK ON DISEASES OF HORSES AND CATTLE.

J. M. Slocum, Stoneham, Colo.—I had an 8 or 9-year-old mare to die the 12th of May. She had been on pasture till 12th of March, when I brought her and fed her up to pretty fair condition; fed her cane hay and corn and some oats and bran. She had been pretty good, started to break sod a month ago, and was very gentle, kind and easy with the team. She started to get weak and one morning she was down and could not get up. She would have foaled in two months. Could not get a veterinary, so got a neighbor, who said the mare was dead and would have to be taken from her, so we took the colt in good shape (colt lived ten minutes), and she never got up, and got worse till fourth day she died. She ate and drank good up till about

THE SUCCESSFUL MAN OR WOMAN

—is one that uses every legitimate means at his command to further his own interests. And nothing is too small, or seems too small, to be pressed into service.

He sees opportunities to save time in the classified pages of his daily paper—in employment of men, disposal of furniture, purchase of this and that.

He realizes that the quickest way to make his wants known to thousands is through these classified columns, which form a common meeting ground for those who read the paper.

He appreciates that at the cost of a few cents he is put in contact with this vast army of people, among whom will surely be someone, or maybe many, who has what he needs or needs what he has.

And, if he lives in Atlanta, or its vicinity, he uses The Constitution, because it reaches the people in the morning, when their mental faculties are alert after a night of rest.

HUERTA STRIVING TO CRUSH ENEMIES

Predicted Capital of Sonora Will Be Taken From Rebels This Week—The Situation at Tampico Is Alarming.

Mexico City, May 25.—The war department expresses the belief that before the end of the week the government will be in possession of Hermosillo, capital of the state of Sonora, that much will be accomplished toward reopening the Mexican railway between Chihuahua and Torreon, and that fair progress will be made in the campaign now being directed from Monterey. Rebel sympathizers, however, would not be surprised if when the week closes the advantage would be on the side of the enemies of the government.

The attack on Morelia, capital of Michoacan, late Saturday was repulsed by federals. Rebels are still occupying positions near the town, but the forwarding of federal reinforcements makes their recovery improbable. It is not considered likely that any state capitals now held by the government will fall into the hands of the rebels, who seem content to occupy the small towns in the rural districts. It is regarded as more likely they will continue their tactics of weakening the government by crippling the railroads, and there is reason to believe their plans include isolation of the Mexican capital itself by cutting the two trunk lines just to the north and the two lines to Vera Cruz, one of which is owned by British capitalists.

Concern About Tampico.

No dispatches were received today from Monterey or Tampico. Much concern is felt regarding the situation at Tampico, which is the center of a district quite thickly populated by American oil drillers and farmers. It is realized that the garrison at Tampico is also unable to do more than guard the city. Eight hundred troops were dispatched from here today to that district, but they must penetrate a region alive with rebels.

Reports from rebel districts say the rebel ranks are rapidly being filled. The government, however, is also adding up the army, many of the recruits being former prisoners, until there are now more men under arms in Mexico than ever before. The character of these recruits and their lack of discipline makes operations with small bodies almost impossible.

The rebels are moving in small mobile bands, which, for the past week, have been active in the states of Jalisco and Hildago, where heretofore there has been little trouble. They have also penetrated the federal district. A small government force was repulsed a few miles from the capital and rebels raided a ranch near San Angel, a suburb.

No Attack on Matamoras.

Brownsville, Texas, May 25.—Up to a late hour tonight no attempt had been made to take Matamoras, across the boundary from Brownsville, defended by 300 federals, although a thousand or more rebels are reported within striking distance of the city. One band, 700 strong, is encamped 15 miles to the west, while smaller forces have taken up positions in other directions. It is believed the insurgents plan to harass the federals into surrender, avoiding a general engagement, if possible.

Wire fences built around Matamoras were charged with electricity today, and the greater number of the federal garrison spent the day in the trenches, awaiting an attack.

Several Americans were detained by Mexican troops in Matamoras for a short time today. In each instance they were suspected of being rebel sympathizers.

Mexicans Lack Food.

Laredo, Texas, May 25.—Lack of food supplies is causing considerable suffering among Mexicans in the small towns between Monterey and the American border, according to C. L. Flack, representative of a Los Angeles lumber firm, who reached this point tonight after an overland trip from the interior. Mr. Flack said federals have concentrated at Villaldama, 80 miles north of Monterey, and are rebuilding the railroads.

Mexican Soldiers Executed.

El Paso, Texas, May 25.—At daybreak in Juarez this morning Antonio Rodriguez and Inicato Hernandez, privates of the Fourteenth battalion, convicted of plotting to instill sedition among the federal garrison, were executed. Rodriguez accepted a bandage for his eyes and cringed at the command "fire." An officer's pistol was necessary to end his life. Hernandez met his death stoically.

PEARL MICRECOCCUS KILLS TUBERCULOSIS

Paris, May 25.—The eminent physiologist, Professor Raphaeld Dubois, of the University of Lyons, has concluded a series of experiments, demonstrating that the micrococcus which causes the formation of pearls in oysters is fatal to the tubercle bacillus.

Twelve guinea pigs were infected with tuberculosis and then inoculated with a culture of the micrococcus. Ten months later all had recovered except one.

Professor Dubois does not wish either to draw conclusions or to make predictions as a result of his experiments, which he is continuing, but hopes that the discovery may aid in the extermination of tuberculosis.

DESPERATE NEGRO, AT LAST SURROUNDED

Charleston, S. C., May 25.—A telephone message to The News and Courier from Barnwell says Sheriff Morris has wired that Austin, Hampton county fugitive, is positively located and surrounded in Screven county, Georgia, 10 miles from Newington, between Sylvania and Halcyondale, and capture certain.

The report is confirmed by the Allendale chief, who returned from the scene today. Men from Allendale and Fairfax have gone to the assistance of the posse.

FATAL FIGHT ARENA BURNED TO GROUND

Calgary, Alta., May 25.—Tommy Burns' prize fight arena in which Luther McCarty was killed yesterday afternoon in the fight with Arthur Pelkey, was burned to the ground tonight.

Hotel Is Burned.

Kirksville, Mo., May 25.—Fire today destroyed the three-story Willard hotel. One guest, an elderly man, has not been counted for late today.

CONTINENTAL CLUB RAIDED BY POLICE

Wagon Loads of Members Given Ride to Station in Police Patrol.

A man walking down South Broad street last night at 11:30 o'clock stopped another pedestrian, and asked: "Could you lend me carefare to get home on? I've just lost a little up at the Continental club, and I live a good distance from here?"

The first speaker was a club member, and the second, in plain clothes, was Sergeant Maddox, of the police department. The sergeant, instead of lending the requested sum, gave the first-mentioned gentleman, with forty-six others, a free joy ride in the finest autos that the city could muster for the occasion.

Calling Officers L. B. Milan, R. A. Wood, Carter, Pittman, Loyd, Kilpatrick and Welchel, the Continental club was duly raided and all within its confines placed under arrest, charged with disorderly conduct.

Wagon load after wagon load was brought from the club house to the police station. Men of every nationality and many of none were rounded up, and treated to a free, if rather crowded, ride in the city's joy wagons.

After the first wagon load was emptied into the police station, the desk sergeant had his hands full, as most of the names were Greek, and Sergeant Holcomb is distinctly American.

A number of the men under arrest aver that they were not gambling at all, simply drinking coffee, and were arrested as being in the place.

GREEKS AND BULGARS ARE STILL FIGHTING

London, May 26.—The strained relations between the Balkan allies show little improvement. A Times dispatch from Athens says that the Greek fleet, while passing Kavalla, was fired upon by Bulgarian shore batteries.

This new incident, following the serious fighting at Saloniki, has created a painful impression at Athens, and the Greek government is making urgent representations to Bulgaria. The danger of a war between the allies distracts attention for the moment from the peace negotiations with Turkey.

A Constantinople dispatch to The Times says that Italy and Germany are disposed, no longer to oppose the cession of practically all the Aegian islands to Greece.

Dayton Raises $2,000,000.

Dayton, Ohio, May 25.—After a week's campaign to raise $2,000,000 to make the city safe against future floods, the successful culmination of the work was greeted tonight with wild demonstrations of rejoicing. Many instances are known of workingmen mortgaging their homes in order to contribute to the fund. The climax of the day came at a mass meeting tonight, when it was announced that the National Cash Register company, which had previously contributed $250,000, would double its gift.

Why Not Have a Houseboat?

(Homer Croy, in Leslie's.)

The word houseboat has a millionaire's sound. But that's wrong; dead wrong. You don't have to have a seat on the stock exchange to own a houseboat. They run up and down in price about the same as automobiles. Goodness knows, if you want to stick a fortune in one you can—there's always a hole for the money; but if you have to keep your eye on the money bag, as most of us do, you can own a houseboat and still not worry about where the next meal is coming from.

A houseboat is a floating home on the water; it's squeezing up the kitchen, folding up the sitting room, compressing the bathroom and putting a hull under them. Then you can knock around anywhere you want to. One girl I heard about bought a houseboat for $200. She picked up an old hull from a fishing man, calked up the holes, built a cabin, named the craft and it was home.

A houseboat doesn't cost so much until you do one thing; as soon as you put power into one then it begins to demand money. By power, is meant, of course, an engine to run it.

The natural houseboat floats. There are three kinds of these craft; the floater, the one that you sail and the one that has an engine. The one without any power at all you have to tow around with another boat. It floats with the current and that is all. The second kind gets around under spread of sail. When you put an engine in you don't give a whoop about the weather. Whim and not wind runs it then.

A houseboat has it over a yacht in a lot of ways; it's not so expensive and it has more room.

If you have $1,200 tucked away in an old woolen sock under a stone in front of the fireplace you can have a perfectly corking time this summer on a houseboat.

Did Not Fool the King.

(Countess Marie Larisch.)

King Ludwig II. of Bavaria, had a wonderful winter garden at Munich, which was built on the roof of the palace. There was also an artificial lake with a painted panoramic background of the Himalaya mountains, and when the king sat in the garden "property" moon shed its gaseous light above the snow-capped peaks.

The kind used often to command artists from the theater to perform in the winter gardens, and I remember the fate which befell Josephina Schefzky, a large, tall woman, whose one wish in life was to attract Ludwig's notice. As all singers sang hidden behind screens, Josephina's chances of meeting the king face to face were exceedingly small; but what woman is ever at a loss for an expedient? She knew how chivalrously romantic Ludwig could be on occasions, so she decided she would fall into the lake, and entreat him to rescue her.

The eventful evening arrived. Josephina warbled her sweetest for the benefit of the listening monarch, and when the song was over plunged heavily into the lake.

There was a tremendous noise, and the water splasted to the topmost summit of the "Himalayas," but the lady remained chin-deep in the lake, whose still waters were not so deep as they looked. "Save me, save me, Lohengrin," cried the agitated singer.

The king rang the bell. "Get that woman out of the lake and send her home," he commanded, and the dripping Josephina, sadder and wiser, walked out of the water and out of the residens forever.

HELEN GOULD AND HER HUSBAND

MR. AND MRS. FINLEY J. SHEPARD

This is one of the best pictures ever taken of Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard. Mrs. Shepard was formerly Miss Helen Gould. Recently back from Europe, where they spent their honeymoon, the Shepards attended a garden party at Governor's island, New York. They were in merry mood when snapped. It was the first time Mrs. Shepard ever willingly faced the snapshot camera. She had always been strongly averse to being photographed and generally turned her head or shielded her face when she saw a photographer approaching. Mr. Shepard, on the contrary, willingly let the camera men get him at the time of his wedding, and it was suggested that perhaps his attitude had resulted in changing his wife's dislike.

JEWELS WORTH $20,000 SECURED BY BURGLARS

Home of Vice President of Arms Palace Horse Car Company Raided in Chicago.

Chicago, May 25.—Burglars today took $20,000 in jewelry and money from the residence of William Jaeger, vice president of the Arms Palace Horse Car company. The thieves entered through a bath room window.

After locking the family and the servants in their respective quarters, cutting the telephone wires and switching off the electric lights, they stole the jewelry. The robbery was discovered when the servants found themselves locked in. Police seek former servants.

"CATCH MY PAL" FIGHT TO STOP DRINKING

New York, May 25.—Here to spread the gospel of the "Catch my Pal" crusade, a temperance movement which he originated, Robert J. Patterson, of county Armagh, Ireland, arrived today on the steamer Cameronia. He declared that 150,000 persons in Ireland have joined the movement. Each person who joins the cause the Irish clergyman advocates and pledges himself not to use intoxicants is under obligation to secure another adherent.

The crusader's individual appeals to passengers on the way across resulted in one of the "driest" trips the Cameronia ever made. The highball output of the Scotch liner was limited and a few concessions to the kind ordered were for the most part served by stewards, who wore the "catch my pal" buttons.

"All we ask is to get the drinkers to take the pledge and get their pals to do the same," said Mr. Patterson. "I have come to spread the movement to the larger centers of the United States and Canada."

ASHES OF POET MILLER GIVEN TO THE FLAMES

Oakland, Cal., May 25.—The ashes of the late Joaquin Miller, poet of the Sierras, were scattered today among the flames of a funeral pyre that had been built by the poet's own hands. The ceremony was held at the Miller home, the Heights. The Bohemian club, of San Francisco, was in charge of the rites, which were witnessed by more than 500 persons, including the poet's widow and daughter, Juanita, and many old-time friends. The services were in accordance with Miller's dying wishes.

No Tunnel Under Canal.

Panama, May 25.—A plan for the contruction of a tunnel under the canal which was recently forwarded to Washington with a favorable recommendation now has been abandoned, it is understood, by Colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer. This is due to the excessive cost, as shown by the final estimate. The construction of a bridge or the establishment of a ferryboat service will be taken under consideration.

POLICEMAN PRESTON HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Negro Fires at Officer at Close Range When Ordered to Move On.

But for quick action on his part, Officer Preston, of the Atlanta police force, would be a dead man today. Last night about 8 o'clock, while walking along Auburn avenue near Fourth street, he and his partner, Officer Wiley, came to, a large crowd of negroes who were blocking the sidewalk.

These were ordered to move on, when a negro, Charlie Brown, said:

"Huh, I don't know about that."

Preston made a move to push him on, when the negro whipped out a 38-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver, and pressing it within six inches of Mr. Preston's stomach, fired twice.

Just as he fired, Mr. Preston swerved to one side, and the bullets grazed his coat, and cut through the trousers of a negro standing behind him.

Mr. Wiley ran to his rescue, and the two overpowered the negro.

Killed in Auto Accident.

Meadville, Pa., May 25.—Thomas Leo Riordan was killed almost instantly and Edwin Bender probably burned to death at an early hour today when the automobile in which they were riding turned turtle in a ditch, pinning both under the car. Farmers brought a lantern when they came to help and, it is said, this ignited the escaping gasoline.

Dies of Injuries.

Chicago, May 25.—Frank Carbone, a member of a physical culture school here, died today from internal injuries believed to have been received while sparring in the school last Tuesday. The police have been unable to locate the owner of the school nor learn the identity of the person with whom Carbone was sparring.

APATHY OF PUBLIC CRYING EVIL OF DAY

Robt. Alston Criticises Tendency of Some Corporations to Meddle in the Political Field.

Likening those corporations which rally political power about them to feudal barons gathering their military underloads, Robert Alston, general counsel for the Southern Express company, denounced the crying evil of the day as a general apathy which enables those holding adverse interests to possess themselves of the spoils.

"The public is enraged by a despotic class of servants," said Mr. Alston in an address to students of the Atlanta Law school, and members of the local bar. "There is an irrepressible tendency on the part of some corporations to meddle in politics, and most voters are too busy with their private business to resent the gradual aggression of self-seeking corporations."

"The rapid and continued accumulation of wealth by corporate power is the next great evil we will have to combat," said Dean Hamilton Douglas in introducing Robert Alston as one of the first graduates of the Atlanta Law school and now of the leading corporation lawyers of the south.

"Our constitution is nearly all commercial," said Mr. Alston. "The bill of human rights is embodied in the amendments. How great is the power conferred by less than a dozen words: 'Congress shall have the power to regulate commerce between the several states.' That clause is like an inverted cone. Volumes upon volumes of laws are based on those few words. They are the eleven words of destiny of the constitution."

Commenting upon how the Webb bill can be sustained, Mr. Alston said: "While congress has no power to prohibit all commerce, it has the power to prohibit all things in commerce which poison the whole. This may mean liquor. It may mean interstate traffic in women.

"White slavery is an evil which comes in waves, and today the public is either more aroused, or there is more than ever of white slavery. To bring a woman from one state to another for immoral purposes is unconstitutional, and Jack Johnson was convicted on seven counts for white slavery because he did this.

"Though the fight against highly commercialized vice is now on in earnest, another phase of interstate commerce has a big commercial significance. Corporations operating in restraint of trade have been declared illegal, but the smaller of the great manufacturers do not really know if they operate in restraint of trade. They are in a twilight zone.

"The idea of state's rights was knocked into a cocked hat by the employers' liability act. The federal government can on this (Monday) evening, May 26. Bill's Importation.

(From Judge.)

We all was married—all of us
What owned the Skookum mine—
But Bill, the city bachelor,
Who never did incline
To splice with any local girls,
Though they all liked him fine.

The women folks got after Bill
Fer puttin' on of airs
And 'lowin' how sweet freedom was.
From conjui-lator cares.
They proved how man ain't worth a cuss.
Not travelin' in pairs.

So Bill he writ a letter to
A weddin' cheonier,
Or bureau—I don't just recall;
"But 'tis a thing to fear,
Through clatmin' it gives hungry hearts
The proper kind of steer.

They caught a female wife fer Bill
And shipped her in by freight.
The women folks was some disjoyed,
But Bill seemed pleased first rate.
And says the importation scheme
Is fine to get a mate.

The days wore on and almost out,
And soon they brung a change.
The joysome Bill became a grouch,
The worst on Sarcade Range.
He wasn't no more welcome home
Than pup hounds with the mange.

So Bill concludes, with womenkind,
All signs and omens fail.
He sells his shares and says, "Good-by'
I'm goin' to hit the trail,
Fer the female of her species is
Most deadly got by mail."

Hope Does Not Enter Here.

(Charles Wellington Furlong, in Harper's Magazine.)

Cayenne red pepper to the world at large, hell to the few thousand of convicts transported to this isolated, northeastern corner of equatorial South America. Here, it was rumored, existed one of the world's most antiquated and revolting penal systems, where thousands of men are exiled and doomed to a living death. Men from French Guiana had intimated conditions which vied with the cruelties of the old convict ships.

Groups of convicts lounged about or lay sick and incapacitated on the verandas. At night the barred iron door of each dormitory is locked, and outside paces a guard, revolver in hand. Sometimes under cover of darkness the inmates settle feuds. Occasionally, to establish leaders, rival gangs fight with cudgels, knives and even paving stones. Generally, though, others dead, the most indomitable are reconciled and form a tyrannical secret society. Many a poor wretch dreads the night hours, and one suspected of informing may be set upon by an enraged pack. Occasionally murder is committed in profound silence, and daylight finds a dead or dying convict in the passageway or entrance. Questioning is useless, and few guards will risk life in entering the barracks when smothered cries and curelngs warn them of internal strife.

All the men I talked with were well disposed toward me, one in particular—a tall, well educated man with a pair of dark rimmed glasses and large eyes fearfully strained through inability to secure proper lenses.

"You must not lose hope," I told a group and almost swallowed my own words. "Hope!" burst out the rich, tremulous voice of the tall man. "It is always the same: there is no hope here." "No, no hope here!" was the echoed murmur of his comrades.

McCauley's Vision at Hand.

(From Spokane Spokesman-Review.)

Macauley predicted the day when a tourist from New Zealand should sit on the broken arches of London bridge and sketch the ruins of St. Paul's Cathedral. The suffragettes of England are anticipating the tourist's job.
